1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem of the origin of life. It is shown that the problem is one of the most important and interesting in the history of science. The author discusses the various theories of the origin of life, and shows that the most probable one is the theory of spontaneous generation.

2. The second part of the paper is devoted to a detailed discussion of the theory of spontaneous generation. It is shown that this theory is based on the fact that life is a complex of many different parts, and that these parts are all derived from a common ancestor. The author shows that this theory is supported by the facts of the history of life on earth.

3. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the evidence for the theory of spontaneous generation. It is shown that there is a great deal of evidence in support of this theory, and that it is the most probable one. The author discusses the various experiments that have been conducted to test this theory, and shows that they all support it.

4. The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the implications of the theory of spontaneous generation. It is shown that this theory has important implications for our understanding of the origin of life, and for the history of the earth. The author discusses the various questions that arise from this theory, and shows that they are all answered by it.

P R E F A C E.

THIS Work has been prepared at the request of several Members of high standing in the Legal Profession in whose offices, some of them sole, and some partnership, the leading features of the system of Bookkeeping, both as regards Costs and Accounts, developed in the following pages have been used for a long time with results invariably satisfactory. It is not, therefore, an untried theory which is now presented to the Profession, but one warranted by extensive experience under circumstances as varied as possible. The Work has been written especially for Solicitors, and is adapted to the peculiar exigencies of their business; the accounts relating to which are in their nature essentially different from those employed in Mercantile operations; in fact, a Law-Accountant who is not also thoroughly competent to draw a Bill of Costs can have but an inadequate idea of all that is required of him in dealing with Cash, and the converse is equally true; for Costs and Cash are so blended in the Accounts of the Profession that both must be thoroughly understood before any one can become an efficient Solicitors' Bookkeeper. This Work, therefore, having been written for a special purpose, no doubt contains much that Mercantile, and some Law, Accountants will consider anomalous, and omits some rules which habit has induced them to believe as essential, but custom is frequently an arbitrary master, whose decrees it is discovered can be very well dispensed with when once they are ignored, and as it is very well known that Solicitors do not like intricate Bookkeeping, everything really superfluous has been omitted from this system, that only which is necessary and useful having been retained, though care has been taken not to pass the line where simplicity merges into inefficiency.

In its details it has been endeavoured to adapt the Work to the requirements of any office, whether of large or small practice, and it will be found that the descriptions of the various Books requisite for the clear and accurate record of Costs and Cash, and the instructions for keeping them, are as full and as explanatory as necessary; and that the Specimens contain entries of all the ordinary Cash transactions which occur in the course of business. The pro formâ Bills of Costs in the Specimen Bill Book are not intended as rigid precedents, though in the character of ordinary precedents they may be found useful, so far as they extend, in every-day transactions between Solicitor and Client. The chief purpose of these Bills is to illustrate the working of the various Books, and their connexion with each other.

It was at first intended to give, in addition, specimens of the method of keeping a medium, and also a small number, of books on the same plan, but as this would have extended the Work to inconvenient dimensions, and it is already larger than any other on the same subject, and as full instructions have been given by which the system can be adapted to any number of books as low as four, such an extension was considered superfluous.

At present it is believed that the directions and illustrations given are of such a nature that the Work may be referred to with confidence on any point relating to Solicitors' Bookkeeping, so as to render it an intelligible and a safe guide to the subject.

INTRODUCTION.

THE great importance to Solicitors of a simple and reliable System of Bookkeeping has been conceded with a slowness and reluctance which is remarkable in a body of professional gentlemen possessed of so much shrewdness and acumen. But, as circumstances appear to indicate, they are at last, if not fully conscious, yet rapidly becoming so, that to toil from year to year in the interest of others, whilst they overlook or neglect the means which contribute so much to ascertain and secure the reward of their exertions, is something like grasping at the shadow and losing the substance. It is surely unnecessary now, whatever might have been the case some years ago, to offer any proof in support of the assertion that, even after the expenses attendant upon good bookkeeping have been paid, the professional income of a Solicitor is greatly increased by his paying that strict attention to his costs and accounts which they not only merit but demand, or that such an increase of income is obtained without in any way injuring the interests of his clients; for it cannot be said with justice, that a man injures those with whom he has business relations when he only seeks to be properly remunerated for his labour and skill. This is one reason among many—and, supported by an honest and laudable self-interest, it is a powerful one—why Solicitors should be in possession of, and strictly follow, a good system of bookkeeping, which term should include the twin departments of costs and accounts, as being so necessarily interwoven with each other, that to handle either of them efficiently the other must be thoroughly understood.

But there is another motive, which to some minds is even more attractive than self-interest. Wherever good bookkeeping exists, there is a positive feeling of comfort and security, and a freedom from harassing conjectures and petty annoyances, so that the mind of a Solicitor is left completely free to conduct the business of his clients, untrammelled with cares as to his own, and such a release is no doubt a powerful aid to business success. It is the mission of figures, scientifically handled, to remove confusion and doubt, and in their place to introduce good order and facts that are easily ascertained.

But to permanently establish such a desirable state of affairs a system of accounts must be divested of complexity, so far as the subject will admit; for if it be intricate, or extended more than is necessary, then all that has been done is to replace one tyrant by another, to eject confusion, yet bend to the yoke of an unwieldy accuracy. It is a fact that the schemes of bookkeeping usually submitted to the profession often fail in their purpose owing to injudicious curtailment and an attempt at simplicity not warranted by experience, or, on the other hand, are so complex and crowded with columns that they are difficult to be kept except by a law accountant; though most of them claim to be more simple and easy than it is possible for a science so exact in its results to be. As many problems are thought to be solved when there is no foundation for the premature confidence, so there are people who imagine that they have by a short cut arrived at a knowledge of bookkeeping, when, if the results are tested, it will be found that they have really wandered wide of the mark. It is important, therefore, that there should be real, but at the same time efficient, simplicity in Solicitors' accounts, that nothing should be done which can reasonably and safely be avoided, and that there should be no more books, and no more columns or entries in them, than are absolutely necessary.

But if at times a false confidence does exist, owing to an imperfect comprehension of an intricate plan, it may be said with considerable truth, that in many offices there is no system at all, save one similar to that used by a Scotch Chancellor of the Exchequer, who hung up a riding boot on each side of the chimney nook, depositing money in one, taking from it as occasion required, and storing his receipts in the other, till, at the end of the year, he turned out the contents of both boots, and thus struck a balance. Incredible as it may seem, there are at the present time, in many offices, systems in use not much better than the Scotchman's. But other offices go to the opposite extreme, and use, or misuse, a large number of confusing, cumbrous, and complex books, which everybody, from the principal to the office boy, seem to have a hand in keeping, and whose results are disorder and inaccuracy.

It is with these considerations in view that the following pages and specimens of Account Books have been published, though it should be understood they are not intended as a treatise upon numbers, nor as developing an elaborate plan of bookkeeping, but to introduce to Solicitors, plainly and intelligibly, a system which has been found to work well in offices of diversified practice, and which is believed to be adapted to any circumstances.

DESCRIPTION OF ACCOUNT BOOKS

AND

INSTRUCTIONS FOR KEEPING THEM

BOOKS RELATING TO COSTS.

No. I.

Call and Postage Book.

(See Specimen at page 77.)

Call and Postage Book.

A reliable record of attendances upon clients and letters written to them and upon their business is very useful when drawing a bill of costs or posting the bill book.

It is usual to employ two books for this purpose, and frequently they are clumsy in their arrangement and do not answer their purpose; for instance, it is rarely, or never, that they tell who has seen the client, or who has posted or delivered a letter, or if they do, it is only by referring to two books that such particulars are gleaned.

Its use and object.

At page 77 a specimen is given combining a call book and postage book in one, and by which it is apparent at a glance what clients have called during the day, and who has seen them: information which is very useful in compiling bills of costs. It is also a record of letters posted and delivered, vouched by the clerk who has posted or delivered them, and there is also a check on the disbursements for postages.

This book should be kept in the general office by a copying or other clerk, who should, every morning, note, as shown in the specimen, the day of the week month and year, and, when a client calls, write his name, and who has seen him, in the proper columns, or a short note of any message or letter he may leave if the principal or clerk attending to his business should be absent. In the parallel columns it should be the duty of some one to enter the names of the persons to whom letters have been sent, and obtain the initials of the clerks who have posted or delivered such letters. Whenever a letter is posted the postage should be charged in the first money column, and the absence of the figure will show that the letter has been delivered. When the clerk receives a sum for postage stamps he should enter it in the outer column, and a comparison of the two will always show the amount he has in hand.

The call and postages book, if properly and punctually kept, will be found a very useful auxiliary; in fact, it is almost of primary importance.

No. II.

Sheets or Day Book.

In the systems usually recommended to the profession elaborate instructions are given for keeping a record of charges from which a bill of costs may be produced in proper form and satisfactory to solicitor and client, but a very simple apparatus is quite sufficient for the purpose. In the best solicitors' offices, both in town and country, each clerk manages his own department, whether it be costs, accounts, conveyancing or common law, and each attends wholly to separate matters, having no superior but the principal.

Sheets or Day Book.

Managing clerks are now an old-fashioned institution, and to confide the general management to one person is somewhat out of date; and copying clerks are not so much employed as formerly, it having been found cheaper and better to go to the law stationer than to be troubled with their dilatory habits and obtuseness. Under these circumstances, the staff of an office is composed of men of intelligence and ability, who can very well dispense with elaborate instructions for a clerk's day book, as to how it is to be kept and what is to be written in it. It is not thought necessary, therefore, to make any remarks as to the variety of books that are sometimes employed in solicitors' offices for the compilation of bills of costs, but proceed at once to show a plan, which has been admitted to be the most efficient and convenient of any hitherto tried.

A reference to the call and postage book will, at the close of the day, inform principal and clerks who have called and what letters have been written, and, with every occurrence fresh in the memory, each person should enter up his attendances and work for the day, which should be done thus:—The bill clerk should have in his possession a quantity of foolscap sheets, ruled with a money column on the right hand and a line to form a rather broad margin on the left. These sheets should be headed with the day of the week, month and year, and with the name of the person who is to use them, and in this state the bill clerk gives one every day to each person employed in the office, who then proceeds to write his charges thereon, filling in every particular, so far as it comes within his knowledge. These sheets are collected daily, at a fixed time, by the same hand that distributed them, and who ought to be an intelligent man, conversant with costs and able to draw and settle a bill. He drafts the charges from the sheets into a bill book, carrying each item to the proper client's account, subdividing the bills when necessary, ascertaining at once and filling in the number of folios in documents and other particulars, and so far as practicable, settling each bill daily. Now, as none but men of intelligence will have had a hand in costs entered in such a way, it will be found that in the majority of instances when a business is completed, the bill relating to it will be settled, or nearly settled, ready to hand; and to meet the necessity which does at times arise for alteration, it is well to have the bill book ruled closer than usual, and between every date to leave two or three lines blank, so that anything which has been omitted might be inserted. Or it may be ruled very closely, and every alternate line only used, which would leave ample room for alterations; but if the bill clerk is competent, the first plan will be found the most advisable and quite sufficient.

Sheets de-

By this plan only one book is necessary for costs, and the sheets, being simply a means of collecting the items in a convenient manner, may, when rightly arranged, be bound in quarterly or half-yearly volumes according to thickness, if it should be thought desirable to bestow care on their preservation for future reference. Many reasons have been urged against the use of sheets, but none of them have been of any real weight, and experience in large offices has determined that the plan of using sheets is by far the best for many excellent reasons; one of which is, that the routine of distributing and collecting them daily forces upon the attention of both principals and clerks the fact, strangely disagreeable to them generally, that their attendances and work must be entered up. There is no valid reason why day books, as they are termed, should not answer as well; but it is a singular fact that, in practice, they are not found to do so by those who have tried both plans. But if books should be preferred, then any kind will answer the purpose; adopting, of course, the same system of posting the charges into the bill book. Under any circumstances, Sheets preferable to Day Books.

Day Books may be used, if preferred.

the chief merit of any plan will be found in the regularity, which should be rigidly enforced, and perfect order with which every one dealing with the charges should be obliged to observe.

Drafting costs. Some offices have a custom of drafting each bill of costs separately, then numbering, indexing, and preserving, the drafts, by which means the use of any book at all is avoided, save an index to bills of costs delivered, which will be hereafter described. But such a custom leads sometimes to grave mistakes, and is not one which a good law accountant would advise to be adopted.

Shorthand in bookkeeping not advisable. A knowledge and the practice of shorthand is an essential qualification for the plan followed in some offices; but clerks of good ability, who, after all, are really the persons that make costs, rarely acquire such a knowledge, which is, in a solicitor's office at least, of a nature quite mechanical, and usually left to those who are copyists and no more. For many reasons, some of which must be self-evident, the extensive introduction of shorthand into a system of bookkeeping cannot be recommended.

Entering costs into the Bill Book direct. But whatever plan is adopted, the great advantages of simplicity, and the employment of as small a number of books as possible should be kept continually in view. In a limited business all preliminary entries may be dispensed with if some responsible and competent person will daily write up the charges against each client in the bill book. But posting the entries into it direct would be inconvenient in a large practice, and under any circumstances does not promote that order and perfect regularity which must be the chief merit of any system. All that is really required is that some person, having a fair knowledge of drawing and settling costs, should undertake the entry in the bill book daily, in a proper and sensible manner, of all business transacted, and in doing so he may adopt sheets, day books, diaries, or any mode, so that it be concise, simple, and efficient, that circumstances render convenient; for, of course, the varying constitutions of different offices make it often necessary to alter and modify a plan which may be precisely adapted to other places.

The sheets or day books of the different principals and clerks should be entered up every morning or evening, but under any circumstances should be ready by a stated hour daily; so that not only the bill clerk may collect them in order to post their items into the bill book, but that they may be ready at any time to lay before the principal. The entries should be full and explanatory, and if the charges are carried out in the money columns by the clerks, and the disbursements entered short, it will be a good plan, and an excellent guide to the principals as to the value of the services of each clerk.

No. III.

Bill Book.

Whilst discussing the method of collecting the Bill Book. charges for the bill book, the importance of as much simplicity as is consistent with efficiency has been inculcated. As has been remarked, different offices require varying treatment, and a plan which will answer exceedingly well in one may require adaptation to circumstances in another.

In offices of large business, where able and intelligent clerks are employed, and where each conducts solely the matter entrusted to him, it has been practically decided that the plan of using sheets is the best and most convenient. The length of documents may be readily gathered from the stationer's account, which should be periodically examined and checked by the bill clerk, and the sheets are, or should be, presented by the gentlemen who fill them up in an intelligible and regular condition, which is a result very rarely attained when anything relating to costs is left to the care of copyists. In an office of moderate practice, where the principal has a managing clerk, the shortest course would be for the latter to enter daily, or at short intervals, but always regularly, the charges to each client's account in the bill book without any medium at all, and in such a case the call and postages book would be found a useful remembrancer.* Or the principal may (and this observation applies also to a small practice, where copying clerks only are employed) keep, in some eligible shape, a clear and full omnium gatherum of all business transacted, and resort periodically to the services of a professional costs draftsman and law accountant, who will readily compile his costs and keep his books in good working order. But caution should be exercised in the selection of such assistance. Not only the person actually engaged in the work, but also those through whose agency he is employed should understand their business perfectly, for if the agent be a tyro in the matter, how is he to judge of the qualifications of another? This is mentioned because the profession are sometimes informed that they can have the service of gentlemen who have especially studied the department of costs and accounts; such gentlemen it is evident being selected by those who really must be, from their occupation, quite unable to judge of the ability of the persons whom they employ. With acknowledged law accountants the case is different, but the profession ought to have some good and real proof that those to whom they entrust their costs and accounts are competent men. Not long ago an application was made to an agency, making itself known by means of advertisements, to send an efficient person to draw costs, and it will be sufficient to name one or two of the items included in the bills he drew to show how well the draftsman was fitted for the work chosen for him by those who were innocent of any practical knowledge of costs or accounts. One of the charges would have excited the ire of a taxing master. It ran thus:—Attending you when you said you would call again, 13s. 4d. Another was as follows:—Attending you when you left a receipt, 10s. To insert such items in a bill showed either ignorance or carelessness; qualities by no means desirable in a costs draftsman, who, when such entries came under his notice, ought to have made searches and inquiries till he had arrived at a proper explanation, which should have been added to the bill, or if such an explanation could not be found, then he should have omitted so objectionable an item altogether, or at least altered its shape, and not put any figures against it. After having drawn a large amount of costs, amongst which such absurdities were by no means scarce, this accomplished and conscientious draftsman obtained from the solicitor, in whose service he had exercised his abilities, a tolerably flattering testimonial, armed with which he would, of course, go elsewhere and do likewise. This shows that those who give testimonials of ability should be fully capable of forming an accurate judgment upon the skill and efficiency of those whom they recommend, for if such capability be absent, the testimony is really valueless. How can solicitors, as a rule, with much more profitable and pleasant work on their hands, be expected to stoop to the drudgery of mastering the mysteries of costs and accounts? But if the costs draftsman be a thoroughly competent person, a solicitor profits largely by the ability and experience which is brought to bear upon his costs and books. The increase in the amount of his charges, and, notwithstanding this, the satisfaction to himself and his client which results from a well-drawn bill of costs, far more than repays him for the apparently, but not really, high remuneration he gives for such services.

As to employment of law accountants and costs draftsmen.

As to the working of the Bill Book.

To show the working of the bill book we subjoin a short bill, observing that it is intended only as an illustration, useful for the purposes of explanation at this place, but that it has no correspondence, in names or amount, with any of the specimens of account books commencing at page 73.

Fair copies of bills of costs, to keep unnecessary.

This bill, names and dates excepted, is a verbatim copy of one which was posted from sheets, and at the close of the business it was found that not a single alteration or addition was required. The bill book which contains it is a model of neatness, and appears more like a book used for copying bills of costs delivered than a draft bill book ; and indeed, it answers, in one, the purposes of a draft and fair copy to keep ; which latter, with proper management, is quite useless and simply a waste of time and material.

mediately upon that being done, the name inserted in the index, the bill should commence with a short description of the matter to which it relates, as concise as is consistent with clearness, and such a synopsis will be found very useful, especially where there are several matters, which should be divided into separate bills. In thus keeping each matter distinct, such as mortgages, conveyances or actions, a great advantage is gained, for besides the increase in the total, the narrative reads intelligibly and connectedly without the confusion which arises from the mingling of several matters in one bill. If in the progress of such business there have been cash transactions which it would not be proper to include in the bill itself, a cash account should accompany the bill when delivered, in which the amount of charges for each matter is debited, but if there are only the usual disbursements for stamps and fees, then there should be a summary at the end of the bill setting forth each matter shortly and showing the total. Of course if it only contains one matter, then no summary is needed. Some prefer keeping the payments, especially when they are heavy, out of the body of the bill, and give a list of them at its foot, by which method the client sees that his solicitor's remuneration is not so large as it would otherwise appear to be, for some people have an absurd idea that a bill of costs is all or nearly all profit.

Payments in bills of costs.

Observations upon pro formâ bill of costs.

It may not be out of place to make a few observations upon the foregoing pro formâ bill, the first item of which calls for no comment, as it explains itself; but the second, which is a charge of 5*s.* for a letter, may be open to some objection. The strict rule is that ordinary letters are 3*s.* 6*d.*, and 5*s.* is charged only when they are long and special; but in a conveyancing practice of the better order the higher rate is the one usually adopted. The third item is unobjectionable; only perhaps in a small affair 3*s.* 4*d.*

would be inserted instead of 6s. 8d. But in all bills a certain discretion, governed by circumstances, must be exercised. In the fourth item 6s. 8d. is charged for the principal, and 3s. 4d. for the clerk, per hour, which is quite proper. Subject to these observations, all these items would probably be allowed on taxation; but it should be borne in mind that in taxing conveyancing costs no positive rule applies, for charges allowed by one Master may be disallowed by another. The reason is that the regulations governing the taxation of this class of costs are yet in their infancy, for until the year 1843 there was no power instituted for taxing conveyancing bills. A portion of the charge for perusing the abstract would probably be disallowed, though it is the scale of 6s. 8d. for three sheets which custom has sanctioned, and which is universally followed in bills not intended to be taxed. Probably 3l. 3s., the same as the fee given to counsel, would be allowed. It may be taken as a rule that a charge of 6s. 8d., and more if necessary, is allowed for instructions for any document whatever, 1s. per folio for drawing, and 4d. per folio for a fair copy, which last is not always made, though it would be disallowed unless produced. One exception to this rule is the case of requisitions on title, which are charged for by the brief sheet. 8d. per folio is the proper charge for engrossing conveyancing documents, which includes the examination of the engrossment with the draft, and 5s. for each skin of parchment. 13s. 4d. for searching for judgments at the Common Pleas office is ample (unless it be done by an agent, when he will charge in addition a letter stating the result), for a quarter of an hour is quite sufficient time to make any search there. The old scale, which was 13s. 4d. for judgments, 13s. 4d. for crown debts, and 13s. 4d. for annuities, may be still adhered to if the solicitor thinks fit; but it would scarcely be allowed, as it applied to the period when a lexicographical index had not been prepared. The case is very different at the Middlesex registry, for there a portion of the list of incumbrances is alphabetical only, and a charge should be made according to the time engaged. 13s. 4d. is usually allowed for reading over and attesting the execution of a deed, but if much time is taken up with the completion a higher amount would be proper. It has been found convenient in practice to keep the disbursements for cab hire and other similar petty payments out of the body of the bill, and give them in one sum at the end, though it has been said that such a plan does not always find favour with a taxing-master. Except where mentioned, the items in the bill would be allowed on taxation, though it is not one which is strictly intended to undergo that ordeal. It is submitted that precedents of costs should contain an analysis and explanations like these, as much better as possible, which would enable a clerk to prepare a bill on all ordinary occasions satisfactorily.

As to charging an agreed sum for bills of costs.

A practice has now become very general of charging a sum agreed on between solicitor and client, which includes everything but payments for stamps and searches for incumbrances. It saves much time and trouble, and is more satisfactory to all parties concerned than the legal, but unsound, system of charging according to the length of documents. But the same entries should be made in the bill book as if it were intended for the bill to be delivered in detail, for at present solicitors in the matter of their charges are treated by an uncomplimentary legislature precisely like cab drivers. If a contract is entered into with a client to transact a certain business for a fixed sum, the solicitor is bound by his engagement, though the more fortunate client may, even after payment, repudiate his agreement, and insist on the payment of such costs only as taxation allows. In the year 1865,

Lord Westbury, then Chancellor, introduced a bill which would have legalized a contract between a solicitor and his client for work to be done; but though a majority of the profession was in its favour, it was unfortunately rejected. A perusal of the debate which took place upon the question in the House of Lords in March of that year will show the able arguments with which Lord Westbury supported the measure, and the objections taken to it by Lord St. Leonards, who, upon the ground that it was an innovation, declared it to be vicious in principle. The subject is one which, thoroughly discussed and examined, will be found of great interest both to the profession and the public. As the great Chancellor justly observed, the restriction which forbids a contract to be entered into between solicitor and client partakes of the error and absurdity of ancient laws, and is practically the last relic which remains in our institutions of the attempt, always being foiled, to regulate the remuneration of persons in any trade or profession.

Lord Westbury's plan as to contracts between solicitor and client.

Each bill in the bill book should commence with an explanatory item, the contents of which are generally furnished by the preliminary attendance. Then the bill should be, in order of date, a clear and connected narrative, and if the entries on the sheets, day books, or other medium, should read discursively, the bill clerk should use such language in framing the bill as will make it read smoothly and properly, each item having reference to, and flowing from the one preceding it. Synthetic arrangement is not wholly thrown away even in the compilation of so dry a production as a bill of costs. As each item is written, the charge should be affixed to it; for though such charges may afterwards—though if due care be observed it is but seldom that they do—require modification, yet at the time a business is in the course of transaction, the particulars relating to it and the adequate remuneration for it, can better be defined than when, from the lapse of time, portions of its history may be forgotten. When the bill is concluded, and its total ascertained, it should be carried to the ledger; and the propriety or expediency of passing it through the cash book will be discussed on arriving at that branch of the subject which relates to the accountant's, as distinct from the bill department.

Disbursement
column in Bill Book.

In the second or outer column,* in the form of a bill book now given, disbursements only are entered, and when the bill is copied for delivery, of course this column is disregarded. But its use is very important, as will hereafter be seen, when describing the disbursement book, for each payment noted in it is posted from that book, and it shows unerringly, if both are properly kept, when any disbursement is omitted, which more frequently happens than is generally known. At the conclusion of the bill this outer column is also added up, and then, at a glance, the amount of profits, distinct from payments, is seen, forming a convenient reference for the solicitor if he should be asked for an abatement of his charges.

One entry may require immediate explanation. It will be observed, that 2*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* is charged for stamps and parchment, and only 2*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* carried into the disbursement column. The difference lies in the fact that a sum of 15*s.* for three skins of parchment is included in one, and not in the other entry; parchment being debited to office expenses with other stationery. The same observation applies in a certain measure to the concluding item also. The note at the foot of the bill may be used or not. If it be used, the final destination of the bill, and how it has been disposed of, whether delivered by post or hand, and as a signed bill or not, is recorded in the book itself, and it takes but very little time or trouble to append such a note; but its absence would cause no inconvenience, for the costs index will contain the same with other information.

Memorandum

Keeping the bill book and the preparation of costs is peculiarly the province of a competent bill clerk, but if the employment of such a functionary be inadmissible, owing to a limited practice or otherwise, then a professional costs draftsman should be periodically engaged, or the principal or the managing clerk should give attention to that branch; though either of the latter two would be better employed in accumulating costs than in recording them. Ordinary clerks only disfigure books, and throw together a mass of incoherent nonsense, irritating to the client and to the solicitor also, whose true interest it is, in this case as in all others, to put the right man in the right place.

Bill Book
should be kept by a competent clerk.

As to the addition of agency charges to a bill of costs, incorporating town with country charges is not a plan generally approved of. The two narratives will not mingle well, and only serve to interrupt each other. The total of the town business may be entered at the foot of the bill as a payment, or it may be given in detail in the same place. If the bill should have to be taxed, it is more than probable that the London agent will have to re-draw it in a proper form for that purpose. Agency costs are, or ought to be, sent into the country with a double column attached, one showing the amount payable to the agent, and the other the amount payable to the country solicitor by his client. Each matter is separate, and, after the totals are ascertained, the country portion is entered in its proper place in the bill book, and the town portion to the credit of the agent in his account. The agency bills are then paged, supplied with a suitable index to each business contained in them, and, being preserved conveniently for reference, the contents are always charges;

their treat-

available when it may be necessary to annex a copy of them to the country charges.

In the specimen bill book (see pages 104 to 116), there is a pro formâ bill showing town and country costs incorporated; a second bill showing town and country costs separate, the agency charges being set out in full at the end; and a third short bill showing the agency costs charged in a lump sum as a payment. As in any business, however heavy, the principle would be the same as in these examples, they may be useful as guides in similar transactions.

Arrears in Bill Book should not be permitted.

The bill book should be posted daily, or certainly not allowed to get into arrear. No blanks that can be filled up should be left, but a space between each date for unforeseen additions or alterations, as already described, is convenient. The business expenses should be carefully and regularly posted from the disbursement book into the column headed "Disbursements" in the bill book, and a reference to the latter attached to the former (see "Specimens of Account Books"). The absence of this reference would show that the payment opposite to it had been overlooked, and its invariable presence that all had been charged.

Voucher Book.

Voucher Book. A voucher book is very useful in large offices where the cashier is frequently giving money to clerks for disbursements, the amount of which cannot at the moment be precisely ascertained. When the cashier hands money to a clerk he enters briefly such particulars as he then knows, and also the amount in the first money column, to which the clerk receiving it appends his initials. Upon his return from transacting the business respecting which the money was received he hands any amount that may remain unspent to the cashier, who enters it in the second column with his initials opposite. The balance will then be entered in the third column, which contains the amounts of which full particulars are to be entered in the disbursement book, with which the voucher book corresponds.

This method enables every one concerned to verify each transaction by the initials of the person receiving or returning money, and is a good authority in settling disputes which sometimes occur upon this subject; for out-door clerks and others are continually drawing money from the cashier without being able to state the precise sum they require, and then it is usual for scraps of paper, in the shape of memoranda, to be floating about in an unsatisfactory manner. Sometimes these clerks draw less than the amount they require, commonly more, and frequently questions arise which originate in a defective memory, or in the loss of the scraps mentioned. Petty payments, for which formal receipts are not given, may also be vouched by means of this book when the cashier's accounts are audited; but it is of no importance to a system further than to answer the purposes indicated, and for the convenience of the cashier, and may be used or not, at pleasure.

Disbursement Book.

The disbursement book is one which may be termed subsidiary to the cash book, or what would be a better definition, a useful but not indispensable assistant to it. A disbursement book may be omitted in a limited business, for every item in it can be entered in the cash book; but in that case the latter would be loaded with a mass of trifling details which would occupy much space and interfere with its neatness and perspicuity. In a large business this interference would become embarrassing, and in practice, where good bookkeeping is enforced, a disbursement book or a book of a similar nature, perhaps under another name, is generally used.

Separation of payments.

Hitherto no disbursement book has been published which will satisfactorily and clearly separate the three classes of payments which usually make up its contents. These are:—Payments on a client's account, which are too trifling to be paid by cheque, but which nevertheless should not be included in a bill of costs, but form a portion of a cash account; expenses incurred on account of the office; and lastly, those disbursements which can properly be included in a bill of costs. With regard to the first class, they ought to be posted from the disbursement book directly into the ledger, so that a cash account may at any time be prepared for delivery in a few minutes; and though it is apparent that such petty payments have been already credited to cash in the cash book, and debited to office expenses in the ledger, yet that circumstance will form no obstacle, as will hereafter be shown when treating of those books. A case is contemplated where it is the routine to pay every amount received, without exception and however trifling, to the principal's bank account, and to draw cheques for all payments above a specified sum, say 3*l.* or 5*l.*; all outgoings under that amount to be paid from the cheques supplied to the cashier for petty cash. Such a rule is strongly recommended to be invariably and strictly followed, unless in rare cases it should be rendered impracticable by the distance of a bank from the office. If a proper and business-like method be observed, no extra labour is incurred in doing this; on the contrary, much is saved, and the total separation of the receipts and payments forms an excellent safeguard against misappropriation or confusion. It has been found in practice that cash transactions so kept quite distinct never get into such disorder as in some hands they are apt to do when mixed up with each other. It is not intended that the pass book should act as a voucher, or as a proof of any transaction, superior or equal to a solicitor's own books, though it is no doubt a good check upon them; but the plan recommended is one highly conducive to good order, and, in addition to other advantages, to a clear and distinct arrangement in accounts. It is important that no payments but those strictly chargeable to costs should be included in a bill; for if there were no other objection it would be a sufficient one that they would often make it appear out of all proportion heavy in amount. These remarks show that some weight is attached to that column in the disbursement book headed "Payments for Clients," and it is certain that inconvenience, causing a resort to awkward expedients, has been felt in working a system where it is absent, as it usually is in books of this kind. As regards "Office Disbursements," their nature is so obvious, and they are so easily separated from other payments, that the column devoted to them requires no comment. The column headed "Business Disbursements" should contain all such payments as can properly be included in a bill of costs, and as there is a reference against it to the bill book, where these items are charged in their proper places (see pro formâ bill, page 92), no payment can be omitted, as is frequently the case where the second column in the bill book and the reference here indicated are absent.

Payments included in bills of costs.

A glance at the arrangement in the specimen forms will explain the other columns.*

Disbursement
Book should be posted daily.

The disbursement book should be always kept entered up, and the column headed "Payments for Clients" posted daily into the ledger, and that headed "Business Disbursements" into the bill book. The amounts "Received to Disburse" should be entered as soon as they come to the cashier's hands, and the book itself should be balanced at the foot of every page, or at least periodically, so as to show at frequent intervals the balance in hand.

Index to Bills of Costs delivered.

Index to Bills of Costs.

This form of an "Index to Bills of Costs delivered" is believed to be entirely original. It is intended to serve more than one purpose, and to show at a glance much useful information, which can only be arrived at usually by a prolonged search, or by keeping an increased number of books.

Contains ad-
clients.

Whether the business be large or small, this book is useful, for it gives, in a readily available shape, the names of clients, their addresses—which saves the trouble of keeping a book for that purpose; for the address of a client is sometimes forgotten, and it is found convenient to have a reference close at hand to ascertain it—and the nature of the business to which the bill relates, which will frequently prevent a search in the bill book; but if that should be unavoidable, then the page and number of that book is shown. Then follow the amount of the bill and the folio in the ledger, in which it is debited to the client—the date of delivery, so that on an application for payment it may be stated when the particulars were delivered—whether it was delivered as a signed bill or not; that is, if sent in such a shape that an action may be brought for its recovery. For such a purpose a bill should have at its foot the words “This is my bill of costs,” to which should be appended the signature of the solicitor delivering the bill, or, to avoid such a formal notice, which may be considered to border on the offensive, a letter may be written referring to the bill specifically, and stating its amount and nature, which letter must be signed by the solicitor personally. Next follows the date of payment, and when it is desired to ascertain in a brief period what bills which have been delivered are unpaid, a reference to this column gives such information at once. The last column may be used for any general notes which it may be found useful to make. This book should have a subsidiary index,* with one letter to each opening, for as the bills are entered in it in order of the date of their delivery (and not alphabetically, which arrangement would be absurd), an index to the names of clients is necessary to show the folio on which an entry may be found. As such a book, containing one hundred folios, would, unless the business be very extensive indeed, last a great number of years, it will be as well that the horizontal lines should not be ruled so close together as is usual, so as to avoid confusing the eye by crowding the matter.

Use and object.

* See Note C.

Signed bills of costs.

Size of book.

It is not absolutely necessary to use this book: it may be omitted without detriment to good order, and if it be determined to have as few books as possible, then let it be dispensed with, but at the same time it is very useful, and amply repays the little time and trouble requisite to keep it; but if used it should not be neglected, and its various columns should be kept with regularity and method, according to their design.

May be omitted.

RÉSUMÉ

AS REGARDS BOOKS RELATING TO COSTS.

Résumé.

BEFORE treating of that department more particularly relating to cash and accounts, it may be well to summarize the results arrived at so far as costs are concerned.

Charges to be entered and posted regularly.

Indexing names in books important.

The first step undoubtedly is for the principals and clerks to record the charges for the work which they perform in a clear and convenient form for collection to each client's account in the bill book. The comparative merits of sheets and day books have been discussed, and whichever may be preferred it matters little in the end, so long as the charges are entered quite regularly and in a proper manner, and that they are posted into the bill book daily, or at short stated intervals, settling each bill so far as possible as it progresses, and not leaving any blanks, uncounted folios, or facts unascertained, which can be cleared up at once, to give trouble and occasion vexation and loss of time at a future date, when the circumstances will have faded from the memory. And it is a very great point for invariable observance to take care never, under any circumstances, to omit indexing the client's name in the bill book, and indeed any other book, immediately the account has been opened. A bill of costs, relating to a matter forgotten for the moment, may be overlooked altogether in a general settlement, and it often happens that duplicate entries are made at great length through carelessness in this respect.

The use and value of the second or outer column in the bill book have been shown, not only as a means of enabling a solicitor to ascertain without trouble or search what may be the amount of his profit on each bill, but also as a correspondence with the column headed "Business Disbursements" in the disbursement book, by which no payment of that nature can be omitted if both books are properly kept. So far then as the costs department is concerned, it would appear that the following books are convenient and conducive to good bookkeeping, though all of them are not absolutely necessary :—

1. POSTAGE AND CALL BOOK.
2. SHEETS OR DAY BOOK.
3. BILL BOOK.
4. VOUCHER BOOK.
5. DISBURSEMENT BOOK.
6. INDEX TO BILLS DELIVERED.

Books advisable.

These are the books that are really almost indispensable in a large business, but in a small one it is possible, by posting the charges directly into the bill book, and by disfiguring the cash book with a host of insignificant items, to dispense with some of them, and the list will then stand thus :—

1. POSTAGE AND CALL BOOK.
2. BILL BOOK.

Books necessary.

But it is more than doubtful if anything is really gained by making one book answer the purposes of two or three; or, at any rate, what is saved in time on one occasion is lost subsequently, and it is therefore advised that a number of books adapted to the circumstances of each practice should be kept, and even the first list is by no means formidable, and in fact will take little, if any, more time to keep than the lesser number. But if it should be determined to keep the accounts of an office with as few books as possible, and it is a matter of indifference whether the cash book is neat or confused, then let it be understood that the bill book receive attention daily, without fail, in some such manner as the following :—At some suitable time during the day collect together the letter book, call and postage book, the letters received and the notes of attendances, and the disbursements for the day having of course been entered in the cash book (a disbursement book not being kept), let it be at hand for reference, and with these materials proceed to post the day's work to each client's account in the bill book direct. Perhaps if this be done very regularly, carefully and methodically, there will not be much omitted, especially in a small business where the attendances have principally fallen under the cognizance of the principal himself; but if there should be more than one principal, or clerks who see clients, then it will be found necessary that they should make minutes of their attendances in their diaries; and this will be only an abbreviated day book, or sheets, in another form, without the clearness and precision which attend full and proper entries.

In a large office an attempt to do without day books or sheets would be simply impracticable, and there can be no doubt that such a course involves some loss in all but small or peculiarly constituted offices.

Regularity to be observed in bookkeeping.

But whatever number of books may be kept, it should be a standing order in the office that perfect regularity be observed in its bookkeeping. Accounts are matters of fact, and will not very well bear a slipshod treatment, or a careless attention given to them at odd times when caprice or inclination may dictate. Much time, trouble and expense will be saved if an appointed hour be set aside for certain work to be done, and if that regulation so far as practicable be rigidly observed. It may be accepted as a certain fact that a solicitor's books will amply repay for the bestowal upon them of proper skill and attention, and that a bill of costs well and carefully drawn is infinitely more profitable to the solicitor and satisfactory to the client than a confused mass of charges thrown together by an ignorant or careless hand, with the unsound idea that it matters little so long as a bill of costs is in some way delivered and paid.

Whether the whole of the books mentioned, or a portion of them are used, these principles apply; but with a limited number even greater care and punctuality are needed than with the full quantity. Two observations are appropriate whilst considering the number of books: whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well; and it is not altogether true that one book, made to do duty for two, consequently saves time or expense.

BOOKS RELATING TO CASH ACCOUNTS.

THOSE books which are necessary, but not all of them indispensable, in dealing with the costs department of a solicitor's office have been discussed, and those requisite to keep a correct record of cash transactions are now approached. In reality only two are absolutely needed for that purpose, though, under certain circumstances, it may be convenient to use an increased number. And here it may be remarked, that if more books are mentioned than are usual or may seem necessary, yet they are referred to in order to fully illustrate solicitors' bookkeeping, and to put before the profession a choice of materials from which they may select such a portion as will suit their individual requirements; but the smallest number of books which should, under any circumstances, be used,

Number of books necessary.

is stated in a subsequent page, and instructions given for keeping them upon a system which the most eminent accountants have decided as one which will secure the much desired result of good and accurate book-keeping with the least expenditure of time and outlay possible. It may further be observed that the plan in course of delineation is not an exclusive system, emanating from a single mind earnest in elaborating a favourite theory, in the pursuit of which all utility which does not coincide with its own pre-determined views is disregarded, but is the result of long and careful investigation, sanctioned by extensive usage and the approval of those who are professionally entitled to decide authoritatively upon the merits of such a subject.

Cash Book
and Ledger.

The two books which must be employed in the cash accounts of a business are a cash-book and a ledger; and the former may well be termed the key-stone of the arch of bookkeeping. To arrive at a proper comprehension of the science—for a professional knowledge of accounts does really deserve that dignified appellation—it is very necessary that the scope and intention of those books should be well understood, and we will therefore give a definition of them. The cash-book is a record of amounts of money received and paid in order of date, and it is submitted that it should be reserved for this purpose exclusively, and not be encumbered with a mass of details foreign to its title and nature. This remark should be borne in mind, as it will have an important bearing upon the question as to which is the simplest and yet most effective form of a cash book.

In that book cash is personified, and consequently all amounts received in the course of business are entered on the left hand or debit side of the folio; cash being supposed to be a debtor for the sum, and amounts paid are entered on the right hand or credit side of the folio; cash being thus credited with any deductions from the total it receives. In the ledger this process is reversed, the name of a person being written on the debit side, and items chargeable against him entered there, whilst cash received is passed to the credit of his account on the right hand side. It will thus be seen that the cash book is an account with an intangible personage, whom accountants term "cash," whilst the ledger is a subdivision of that book into a multitude of accounts with actual persons—the cash book showing the total result, and the ledger the individual results.

If these books are properly kept they answer unerringly, and as often as choice may dictate, the two important questions which should be always kept in view:—(1) Whether the capital invested in a profession or business increases or decreases in the course of the operations performed upon it, and, as a corollary, whether there is a profit or loss, and how much of either; and (2) the amount of debts, in gross and detail, owing to and from a solicitor, and whether his assets or liabilities are the greater. These points accurately determined, the end of bookkeeping is attained, and the results of giving and taking credit, and paying and receiving money, in which the dealings of a business consist, being known, nothing further can be required. Balance sheets and cash accounts, whether between solicitor and client, rental, in a chancery suit, of executors or administrators, or in any other form, are but off-shoots of the cash book and ledger system, which once understood renders the preparation of any such matters easy to a mind disciplined by the continual use of figures. The student of bookkeeping will do well, therefore, to master the intricacies of these two books thoroughly, and having done so he will have passed over the pons asinorum of accounts, on the wrong side of which so many, as is precisely the case with a nobler science, toil and confuse themselves, labouring under the rash and mistaken notion

requires appli-

that they have passed it, when really they have missed the mark altogether. To enter debits on one side and credits on the other seems very simple, and truly some works on bookkeeping would fain make the whole routine of accounts delightfully easy to the most limited comprehension, but if an accountant examines the books of an office after they have been kept by a person whose tuition has been so rapid and professedly complete, they are found to be very far removed from a satisfactory state. Bookkeeping is simple, when once its principles are digested and thoroughly understood, but this result cannot be brought about by an hour's moderate application, as in one instance it is said it can be. Whenever such an absurd assertion is made, it may be taken for granted that he who makes it is unacquainted with the subject of which he treats. When such a confident statement is put forward respecting bookkeeping or any other attainment, there rises to the recollection the story of the bird which, when all the other members of the feathered race had been taught how to build their nests, had in some way been absent, and making a complaint of its destitute condition, another bird, perfect in the art of nest building, was directed to impart the necessary skill. Only a portion of the task was accomplished when the untaught bird screamed out to its instructor:—"That will do: I know perfectly well how to make a nest now," whereupon the teacher left in disgust, and even to this time the prematurely knowing one can build only half a nest, and is, perforce, content with such imperfect accommodation. It is strongly suspected that many bookkeepers are in the same position, and that, stopping at the half-way house towards efficiency, their last state is worse than their first. This is not written to deter any reader from learning bookkeeping, an accomplishment so beautiful and exact in its demonstrations, but rather to induce him to devote a proper amount of time and attention to its study, for which he will be surely and pleasantly rewarded. That which the mighty mind of Newton remarked of a great science is as true of a comparatively unimportant one:—"It was only as the field of knowledge opened before me that I became painfully aware of how little I really knew."

It is an accepted maxim that bad bookkeeping is worse than none; the bad leading oftentimes to a false security. Intelligence and skill are most certainly necessary to make a good or even tolerably useful accountant; the intelligence of course no instructor can give; but that qualification present, a patient application will produce the skill, and the materials for that application it is hoped may be gathered from these pages. There is another fallacy which ought to be dissipated, which is, that the bookkeeping of an office, meaning costs and cash, may be disposed of by a copying clerk in a short time, say an hour, each day. Under any circumstances where this can be done the business must be small indeed, or the work must be clumsily and imperfectly performed, to the loss, though he may be slow to perceive it, of the solicitor. If the items are only copied into the bill book from the sheets or day books, a mass of matter may be almost uselessly transcribed in a short time, but very little would be gained unless the charges in the bill book presented some connected and sensible shape, so as to be ready for settlement. Besides, every one knows how annoying is a mere copyist in accounts, and how, under such a management, many routine charges are omitted which ought to be inserted, and would be inserted, to the profit of his employer, by a competent bill clerk. This remark applies quite as forcibly to the task of posting the contents of the cash book into the ledger. It is not always that the one can be judiciously an exact copy of the other; besides, balances and many other details are continually occurring which require time and attention, and demand the treatment of a person possessing a knowledge of accounts.

Employment of accountants,
&c.

A solicitor having only a small business would find it profitable to employ such a person, even if he were not wholly occupied; for if he were a competent costs draftsman and bookkeeper he would possess general abilities through which his time could be utilized when not engaged in those departments, but in an office of large practice it is simply pecuniary suicide to dispense with such services. Good bookkeeping is really so important, profitable and indispensable, that if a solicitor determine not to have a bookkeeper on his permanent staff, he should take a course which is often adopted with much advantage—to enter into an annual contract with an accountant, by which his costs and books would be always kept in good order at an expense less than that of a clerk constantly employed for the purpose.

No. VII.

Cash Received.

(See Specimen at page 145.)

Cash received.

May be omitted.

This book bears nearly the same relation to the cash book as the sheets or other forms for collecting the materials for costs bear to the bill book. It may be used or not, as found convenient, or as the circumstances of an office render the employment of many or few books desirable. But in the accountant's department of large offices it has been found to be of much use, nor is any time in the end lost by making the entries in it. It is proposed to label this book "Cash Received." It has been called a waste book and by other names, but the words "Cash Received" are more truly descriptive of its nature than any other title.

It is intended to serve two useful purposes: to collect in readiness for the cash book the particulars of the money which has been received from time to time, and to show at a glance the totals paid into the bank day by day. With regard to the first purpose, it is well known that when entries are made in a cash book at irregular intervals, as the money is received, it presents very often a dirty and confused appearance, and that erasures and interlineations are frequently made which disfigure the page and disturb that neatness which should characterize the principal books of accounts. Such alterations are sometimes rendered unavoidable from the fact that the exact circumstances attendant upon an entry are not always known at the moment the amount is received, so that the explanation of an item, which ought always to be full and explicit, cannot be then given, but those circumstances generally become known a short time afterwards, though no delay whatever ought to take place in making a minute of a cash transaction. In the book suggested such a minute can be made at once, which can afterwards, say once a day, be copied into the cash book fairly and neatly, either in the same shape, or in such an extended or altered form as subsequent information may make desirable. At the same time, if the rough entry should ever acquire any value as an original record, the book will at any period present it for inspection. And further, the cashier, whether principal or clerk, may not always be in the office to receive money, and when it is received in his absence, the person so receiving it may make the entry in "Cash Received," and his handwriting will show that he has done so. He will then pay it to the cashier on his return, who will acknowledge its receipt by adding up in his own figures the different sums received and paying the total into the bank, making a note of having done so opposite, and this will prove that the amount has been paid to the cashier by the clerk who originally received it and that the cashier has paid it to the bankers, every stage of the transaction being thus verified, the final disposition of the money vouched, and the basis of a full description of the item preserved without disfiguring the cash book by blots, erasures, or dirt.

The second purpose is secured by the cashier, if the banking operations pass through the hands of that functionary, or if not then by the principal, who would have charge of this particular book, adding up the items as has been mentioned, and daily, or as often as they amount to a sufficient sum, paying them into a bank; and it is evident that these totals so paid in will exactly correspond with the credits in the banker's pass book, affording at any time an easy and sufficient check upon its correctness.

This book, to be styled "Cash Received," would also be found very useful in a case where a principal should decide upon being his own cashier. By its aid, and with the counterfoil of his cheque book, he will always have the cash and banking transactions of his business under his own immediate supervision, whilst he can present to his bookkeeper the materials for posting the cash book and ledger in such a state that those books may be kept in a neat and readable condition; for it is one of the canons of good bookkeeping that a knife should never be suffered to touch an account book. If alterations must be resorted to, let them be made with the pen, so that their effect may be seen, and that it may not be said that the account has been garbled in any way.

All money to be passed through a Bank, if practicable.

The example of "Cash Received," given at page 145, is framed upon the principle of passing all moneys received, however small and insignificant the amount, to a bank account, and the payment of all money by cheque—above 2*l.* or 3*l.*, as may be fixed—actually given to the payee, and below such sum by cash drawn from the bank in amounts of 10*l.* or as circumstances may require, and passed through the disbursement book.

This principle is almost essential to the use of good, accurate and clear bookkeeping in a solicitor's business; and in large offices of the highest standing both in town and country it is a rule rigidly observed. Such a course entails no expense in London, or in most towns, but in some remote districts bankers still charge a commission of something like a quarter per cent. on all payments by them—a system wholly opposed to the modern spirit of banking, and one which will no doubt speedily have to give way to the more civilised plan introduced by the joint-stock banks, by whom, of course, no charge is made for receiving and paying on a current account; though if the balance be kept on the average up to a certain amount, some of those banks allow interest on such a balance, and all of them possess immense advantages over the obstructive spirit of the old banking system.

But even where such a charge is made by a bank, which is very seldom indeed, at least all disbursements for office purposes, or relating to costs, should be supplied to the cashier by cheque, which plan, by preventing the mixture of receipts and payments, forms a strong preventive against confusion or misappropriation. Heavy transactions, such as the receipt of money from a mortgagee to be paid to a mortgagor, or similar cases, need not pass through a bank if any charge for payment be made by the bankers, and in such an instance it should appear upon the face of the book "Cash Received" how much of each total is paid into the bank, and how much passed to the cash book without going through the bank. No inconvenience will be felt by doing this, though it is much preferable to pass all money through a banking account, where bankers conduct their business so as not to make it an oppressive charge to do so. But whether the cash of an office is passed wholly or partially through a bank, this book will be found useful and convenient; though, as has been remarked, it may be employed or not as is thought fit.

Counterfoil of Cheque Book.

Cheque Book.

Full particulars to be written on counterfoil.

At pages 151 to 156 specimens are given of the manner in which the counterfoil of the cheque book should be filled up whenever a cheque is drawn. Full particulars should always be given; such as date; to whom the cheque is paid; name of the client whose business requires the cheque to be drawn, and to whose account the amount is to be debited; for what purpose the payment is made, noting any deductions for costs, income tax or other matters, and the nett amount. When the cheques are posted into the cash book the folio to which each cheque is carried should be noted, which will not only show that the cheque has been posted, but where.

Examined with pass book.

Both the totals shown in "Cash Received" and the counterfoils of the cheque book should be periodically examined with the bankers' pass book to see that the amounts are correctly entered, and when the cheques are returned from the bankers they should be sorted in the order in which they were drawn, made into bundles, labelled and preserved for reference.

No. VIII.

Cash Book.(See Specimen at page 158.)

The cash book is, as has been observed, a daily record of money received and paid, and the ledger contains separate accounts with each of the persons receiving or paying such amounts. The latter book has been described as an abstract of the former, which conveys a false idea, and is an abuse of a term too often misappropriated. An abstract of a subject is, of course, an epitome or condensed statement of it, whereas a ledger is really an enlargement or diffusion of the entries in a cash book. A better definition would be, that a cash book is a single account with cash, personified for the especial purpose, in which all transactions are treated in the aggregate, and a ledger is a book containing accounts with persons and property, in which each transaction is shown in detail. The cash book may be called a journal if preferred; for being an account of daily monetary events the word "journal" is peculiarly appropriate to it as regards accounts, though, in a solicitor's office, it would differ materially from the usual acceptance of the term in mercantile bookkeeping, where it is used to collect various subjects for posting into the ledger. It is contended that a cash book, above all other books, cannot be too simple and clear in its construction; and if it be borne in mind that its chief purpose is to contain a list of receipts in one page or column, and a list of payments in another page or column, both running parallel and contemporaneously with each other, we have all that is positively necessary, and an idea which is divested of complexity and easily put in practice. When a cash book is a hybrid sort of an affair containing accounts with bankers, profit and loss accounts, accounts of partners with each other, and such matters, it departs from its true purpose and becomes neither cash book nor ledger, but a confused mixture of the two. It may look very pretty, and may attract by its novelty, or, doubtfully, save an extra account being opened in the ledger; but let there be no misunderstanding about the matter, it is no longer a cash book or a cash journal, nor is it a ledger. Again, it is not absolutely necessary to load a cash book with a series of complicated transfers, which present a false total and cumber its pages with operations that can be performed elsewhere with a more sensible meaning. Let us take an instance from folio 1 of the specimen "Cash Book," given at page 158. There it will be seen that the solicitor supposed to keep that book received from T. Giles 100*l.* to be advanced to Mr. Attwood. Now, in the ordinary way, this amount would appear in the debit or received page of the cash book, and from thence be posted into the ledger to the credit of Giles. So far this would be a real representation of facts, but then there would follow, according to the orthodox method, two entries in the cash book, effecting a fictitious transfer of the amount from Giles to Attwood, because it is to be ultimately paid to the latter person. And so the same amount again appears in the cash book on both sides, and from thence to the ledger; this time to the debit of Giles and to the credit of Attwood. Now, so far as the cash book, not the ledger, is concerned, what really useful purpose is served by these two entries, representing a transaction wholly imaginary, appearing in its columns? Exactly the same amount is entered both on the credit and debit side of the ledger, therefore they cannot affect the balancing of the two books with each other; and if a cash book be an account of cash received and cash paid, it is quite clear an operation has been performed alien to its principle ; for, as regards the transfer of the amount from the account of Giles to that of Attwood, no money has actually been received or paid. In the ledger such a transfer is, of course, necessary and proper, but it cannot be indispensable in a cash book ; and the same may be said of a great deal of other matter which usually appears in it.

It should be recollected that it is solicitors', not mercantile, bookkeeping which is being discussed ; and that the purpose is to promote simplicity, so far as it is compatible with efficiency. If the solicitor considers it necessary or ornamental that such transfers should be made through the cash book, by all means let it be done, and the old beaten track will then have been followed ; but he will find that his cash book will be much more complex and cumbersome with than without them. But it is only fictitious transactions which may thus be excluded from the cash book, and not real receipts and payments in any form, such as capital brought into the business, payments to and cheques upon bankers, and similar matters, in which money actually passes from hand to hand. It is scarcely necessary to say that entries of such events are not only proper, but must appear in the cash book, as well as miscellaneous receipts and payments.

The form of a cash book, of which a specimen is given at page 158, is suggested for the sake of simplicity, and there is no column for dates, because it is advisable to have as much space as possible for a full description, and also because the transactions belonging to each day should be kept opposite to each other—the proper method—and not, as is often the case, show entries upon one page a month in advance of entries upon the other ; but if it be preferred, a column can easily be added to the left hand side of each page for the dates. A specimen of the transfers alluded to as being superfluous in a cash book is distinguished by being printed in italics. In a large business these transfers are very numerous, and consequently crowd the cash book greatly.

Adapted to any circumstances.

This form of a cash book is believed to be as simple as is possible, whilst at the same time it is efficient, and its principle adapted as well to the requirements of the smallest business as to every transaction of the extended practice of a large firm. It is equally applicable to cases where all moneys are passed through a bank, or when only partially so, or not at all.* In the latter case, of course, instead of the balance shown by the bank account in the specimen accounts, it will be shown by the cash book. Bills of costs, as they are delivered, are not carried through it. To do so is unnecessary; besides, bills of costs are not cash till they are paid; but its general scope will be better understood when compared with the ledger accounts corresponding with it.

Posting the Cash Book.

In making the entries in this cash book daily, or at intervals, such as custom and convenience have established in the office in which it is used, the bookkeeper should have before him the book called "Cash Received" and the cheque book. These two will supply him with the necessary particulars, and he should take care to mark in both the proper reference to the folio of the cash book in which each entry is made. It is important to observe that whenever a cheque is drawn the counterfoil should contain full particulars of the payment, and this done, and concise but explicit particulars of receipts being entered in "Cash Received," the materials are always ready for posting the cash book neatly and expeditiously, even when circumstances have compelled such posting to be deferred for a time.

such a shape as may recommend itself to some solicitors, for which reason it is given, but merely as a suggestion, by adopting which the narrative of transactions as they arise flow uninterruptedly; though the division of receipts from payments, by assigning a page of the folio to each, has been so long sanctioned by custom and authority, seems to fit facts so appropriately, and appeals so readily to the eye, that it is not likely the plan of journalising cash entries, as it may be termed, will ever become permanently popular.

It will be seen with the aid of a short analysis and by making a few more trial entries that in this form we have a columnar system, which of late years has been much discussed, divested of much of its complexity, whilst the same results are attained; only two additional accounts in the ledger being needed to make the simpler form equal to the elaborate columnar one. These accounts are for the bank and profit and loss, and neither belong to a cash book. In fact, caprice and ingenuity may twist that book into endless shapes and forms, but it will be generally found that when the standard style is departed from the only success attained is complexity. Some cash books profess to divide one class of money from another, some keep profits distinct, and some bank transactions; but all such plans will be found upon examination to be nothing more nor less than accounts which ought to be kept in a ledger forced into a book where they ought not to be, and to which they give a distorted and intricate appearance.

The fact is, ordinary bookkeeping, as it has been, and as it might be, is something analogous to astrology and astronomy. Astrology confused its disciples by a multitude of cabalistic signs and an abundance of unmeaning jargon, for which astronomy has substituted a clear and intelligible process of reasoning, from which results that are always certain emerge without a quibble or enigma to darken their meaning. And thus bookkeeping has been surrounded by a cloud of purposeless words, and made intricate by processes that are useless, and at times positively injurious to a rapid comprehension of the real bearing of facts and figures, whilst, by eliminating from its dictionary terms that are called technical, but are simply verbiage, and by striking off the professional encumbrances which disfigure its proportions, it might be presented in a simple and easy shape, the beauty of which would not only be preserved but augmented. One instance among many may be mentioned, the time-honoured words "to" and "by" are not only cumbersome, and carry no meaning, but are in fact puzzling to a learner, and surely the words "received" and "paid" explain their intention more clearly, and have a better and more positive effect. And so with needlessly multiplied transfers, elaborate columns and obscure terms and operations, which serve no good purpose, and had much better be rejected, and simplicity adopted, than retained only for the sake of appearing to be versed in the mysteries of a science which ought not to have, and properly has not, for figures are irresistible demonstrators, any mystery at all.

No. IX.

Ledger.

The accounts in a ledger are composed of two classes, necessarily having an intimate connection with each other. They may be described as personal and impersonal; the former being accounts with persons, and the latter with property, such as capital, bank, furniture, stock, profit and loss, and partnership accounts.

Ledger.

Personal and impersonal accounts.

The ledger has escaped much of the experimenting to which the cash book has been subjected, and still retains its primitive form, which indeed does not seem capable of great alteration. It should be posted from the cash book regularly and methodically, the receipts in a ledger occupying the credit or right-hand side, and the payments the debit or left-hand side.

Whenever an account is opened in the ledger, care should be taken to insert it in the index with which that book is always provided, as much confusion often arises from this precaution having been neglected. Then give such particulars of the transaction which is the subject of the entry as shall render it thereafter a really trustworthy minute for reference, which will save a great deal of trouble and loss of time, and cause a perusal of the ledger for future information to be rather a pleasure than a source of annoyance arising from occurrences imperfectly recorded and half forgotten. To facilitate this fulness of record, the debits and the credits should each have a page to themselves, the two pages forming together one opening of the book, or what is termed by accountants a folio. The bare words "To Cash" and "By Cash" are wholly out of place in a solicitor's ledger, which is nearly useless unless it contains full and explanatory entries. Having made the entry, add the reference to the cash book, and at the same time insert a counter reference in that book also. These references from one book to another, or from one folio to another of the same book, are very important, as their absence, or presence is, or should be, an invariable test as to whether the items have been posted or if they have been overlooked.

Directions as to entries in the Ledger.

References from one book to another important.

Size of Ledger. The ledger may be of foolscap size, but demy is preferable, for it affords more space, and at all events looks better. A ledger should have somewhat of a noble appearance, and certainly foolscap lacks in dignity and gains nothing in utility. The accounts of some clients require a whole page or more, others half a page only, while there are entries, many or few, according as the business of an office is miscellaneous or not, which consist of only a single transaction, and provision should be made for these contingencies, so that there may be no waste of space or unsightly gaps.

Posting the ledger punctually is necessary.

If the ledger be kept closely posted, the state of a solicitor's accounts, either as regards the profit upon his business, the increase or diminution of his capital, and with each individual client, can be ascertained directly, provided that the bills of costs are settled and debited to each account, as they ought to be, as often as the matters to which they relate are completed.

All entries in Ledger need not pass through the Cash Book.

It is not necessary, nor even convenient, that every entry made in the ledger shall previously have been passed through the cash book. That course may be adopted if desired, but it is simply cumbering and confusing that book to no good purpose. Merchants do not usually do so, and why should solicitors? Mercantile bookkeepers collect the entries for their ledger by a day-book for goods sold, an invoice book for goods bought, and a cash book for cash received and paid. A solicitor's bill book, and its auxiliary (see p. 140), answer the same purpose as a merchant's day book, and as solicitors do not, in the practice of their profession, purchase any goods on credit, except perhaps stationery and similar unimportant items, which can be carried direct to the ledger by being credited to the persons supplying such articles, and debited to profit and loss, they have no need of anything resembling an invoice book; and in this one respect only their accounts are simpler than those of a merchant.

It will be seen in the specimen ledger that the bills of costs, as they are delivered, are debited against the client, and at the same time credited to profit and loss, thus making the double entry complete, and its passage through the cash book superfluous. There is a sum of £10:14s. 5d. credited to profit and loss, which is rendered necessary by that sum having been included in cheques for disbursements (see p. 135), and for convenience of small cash payments having been passed through the disbursement book; but as it forms no portion of office or business expenses, profit and loss is compensated by the amount being carried to its credit. These petty payments for clients are not often numerous, though they form a source of inconvenience when all payments are made through a bank, as has been described, unless they are treated in this way; and whenever the ledger is balanced, which should be frequently, they should be carried from the disbursement book to profit and loss in one sum.

If the accounts in the specimen ledger and private ledger given from page 174 to 224 are analysed, it will be found that the profit and loss, bank, partnership, and other accounts, are represented fully, fairly and briefly, and that simplicity and clearness have been secured in the cash book, without in the least sacrificing efficiency, convenience, or time, whilst the state of a solicitor's monetary affairs is at all times and immediately shown. If he wishes to know how much of his client's money he has in his possession, a reference to his private ledger (impersonal) accounts will give him the information in five minutes clearly and readily, provided the books are kept closely posted; and also accurately, which is not always the case when matters not strictly belonging to cash have been introduced into the debit and credit columns of the cash book. He has thus before him, in a readily accessible form, the fact of increase or decrease in his capital, the amount of profit derived from his business, and the aggregate debts due from and to him. Individual debts, either way, will of course be ascertained, as they must in any case, from his periodical balance sheets. It makes no difference whether all receipts and payments be passed through a bank or not, the result is the same. At one time, no doubt, before the present system of banking had become developed, it would have been found inconvenient and onerous to pass all cash through a bank, but now it is the best policy to do so, and whoever neglects such a plan misses an excellent help to simple and efficacious bookkeeping, and deprives himself of a safeguard against misappropriation.

Balancing the Ledger.

Balancing the ledger is a very simple operation, and upon a small scale is shown in the specimen private ledger, at page 224. It should be performed thus:—Balance each individual account in the ledger at stated intervals—three months is not too often, but it should not be delayed beyond six months—and bring forward the balances to the proper debit or credit respectively, as the case may be. Make a list of such balances, dividing them, of course, into debts due to and from the solicitor, the totals of which will, if the posting has been done correctly, agree, taking into account any cash which may be in hand at the time of balancing. A copy of this list should be kept, either in the ledger itself, or in a private ledger, as a frequent examination of it is very useful, recalling debts to the memory that might otherwise be overlooked. It is always a complete statement up to the time when the balance was taken, with the exception of unsettled bills of costs to that period which have not yet been debited.

If an equilibrium be not established, then it will be necessary to examine the entries item by item, putting a mark against each as the examination proceeds, and thus the error will be discovered. Careful book-keepers do this at frequent intervals, so as to be always sure of the correctness of their posting. The banker's pass book should often be examined, and if its balance should not agree with that of the bank account in the ledger, the discrepancy should promptly be investigated; but, as bankers are generally very exact, the difference will probably be found to be due to outstanding cheques, credited in the ledger, but not yet presented to the bankers for payment.

Postings to be checked.

Banker's pass book to be examined.

A solicitor's books may be balanced as often as desired, but such balance does not include unsettled bills of costs, nor the disbursements, such as counsel's fees, which are made on account of them. Such payments as appear in the body of a bill of costs are included in the cheques drawn for disbursements, and have consequently been debited to profit and loss, the debits of which (including bad debts or abatements on bills) and the credits are in gross. The business disbursements charged in bills of costs will have been posted from the disbursement book to the bill book, and of course increase the outstanding costs.

Trial balance.

The object of a trial balance is to ascertain the correctness of the posting, and this may be done by balancing each account in the ledger, bringing forward the balances to the debtor or creditor page to which they belong; then copying the sums so obtained into two columns, adding up each column, taking into account cash in hand, when they ought to be equal to each other.

Unsettled bills of costs to be estimated when balance sheet prepared.

As this is done simply to be sure that the books have been correctly kept, of course neither unsettled bills of costs nor the payments made on account of them will have been taken into account, save that such payments will have been debited to profit and loss. If a balance sheet is to be prepared, intended to show the solicitor's position, then all bills of costs should be settled, so far as practicable and convenient, carried to the credit of profit and loss, and debited to clients in the ledger; and when they cannot be settled, or where the matter is still in progress, then the amount should be estimated as closely as possible, allowing for contingencies, and such amount included in assets, but not passed through the books in any other way. This is done periodically in some offices, as in the nature of things under any arrangement unsettled costs must be an uncertain element in a solicitor's balance sheet. Balancing is an easy matter, as a little investigation will show; for, supposing the books to have been correctly kept, they are always in a state of balance, though the operation can readily be made difficult by injudicious arrangements, useless intricacies, or incorrect posting.

Preparation of balance sheet.

Private Ledger.(See Specimen at page 204.)

The only book of accounts remaining for discussion is the private ledger, respecting the utility of which opinions are divided. Private Ledger.

Both ledger and private ledger are one and the same book, the latter being merely a certain class of accounts selected from the former for the sake of privacy. But there is still a definite distinction between them, for those accounts which it may be desirable to keep from the inspection of clerks or others, branch off, as it were, instinctively from the general accounts. It is thus that personal accounts with clients, or with persons having cash transactions with an office, are kept distinct from impersonal accounts, such as profit and loss, capital, and similar entries. And the private ledger does at times, though it is an exception to the rule, contain accounts with persons, for the bank and partnership accounts are generally kept in it; but the broad distinction is that whatever entries necessarily show a brief and clear statement of a solicitor's monetary position are relegated to the private ledger, while accounts to which constant reference is unavoidable, and which do not impart such a knowledge readily, are kept in the ledger. But both books are really one work divided into two volumes, and for all practical purposes must be regarded under the general term—ledger. Contains impersonal accounts.

The points to be considered are :—Is it really useful that there should be such a division? and does it fulfil its intended purpose of secrecy? As to the utility of the operation there is none whatever, and setting aside the consideration of privacy, it is regarded as unsound in principle that the ledger should thus be divided into Utility of two volumes, for if fanciful theories are given way to in this respect, the same reasoning which urges more than one volume will very easily furnish arguments for twenty. The cash book and ledger are the two most important books of accounts; in both their unity should be strictly preserved, and neither should have a second volume attached until the first is filled, so that each volume may follow its predecessor in point of time only, and the whole form a connected and continuous narrative. Besides, ledger accounts, if conducted upon a proper double-entry system, are so interwoven with each other and render necessary a reference from one to the other so often, that it is awkward to have to consult two large books, and annoying when it is considered that only one is really necessary.
Private

accounts.

As regards privacy, no doubt much is gained, especially if the general ledger should have to be produced in a court of law or elsewhere.

Accounts in Private
Ledger.

The private ledger is ruled in the same way as the ledger, and has an index, the only difference being the label on its back, and the accounts usually kept in it are—Capital; Profit and Loss; Stock; Amounts drawn against Profits; Bank; Furniture; List of Debtors and Creditors; Periodical Balance-sheets; and such others as choice or convenience may prescribe.

Capital Account.—This, of course, is the sum invested in the business, and the first process will be to debit cash with the amount, or if a firm, with the respective amounts contributed by each partner. Then carry such entries to the credit of capital account in the private ledger. If the amount should be increased or diminished from any cause whatever, the account which causes the alteration should be debited or credited, as the case may be, and the proper entry carried to capital, and whenever the books are balanced the amount due to capital at that date should be brought forward, so as to periodically show the state of affairs.

Profit and Loss.—This is an account in which, on the credit side, are entered profits arising from bills of costs, commissions on rental receipts, interest on sums advanced or other sources; and on the debit side, payments for office disbursements, salaries, insurance, bad debts and other expenses. This account is balanced periodically, and the balance, which we will presume to be always in favour of profit, not brought forward, but carried to the credit of Stock, which account is then debited with the proportion of profit allotted to each partner, and if any amount should remain undivided, it is brought forward to form a reserve till the next balance.

If the business is a single one, there is no reason why the profit and loss and stock accounts should not be combined in one, which would simplify the entries and save a folio in the ledger; but if the business is that of a firm, then it is better to keep them separate; and there must also be

Partners' Drawing Accounts, to the credit of which, in due proportion to each partner, must be entered the sums which have been debited to stock. Against such credits will be found the amounts which each partner has drawn on account of profit, and which have been posted from time to time from the cash book as they were drawn. A balance of each partner's account at the usual time will show whether he has underdrawn or overdrawn his proportion, and he can either pay or be paid, or the amount can remain as an asset or liability.

Bank.—In this account all the sums paid in are entered on the debit side, and all the cheques drawn on the credit side. It is, in point of fact, a transcript of the banker's pass book, and, taking any cheques that may be outstanding at the time of balancing into account, should agree with it. The balance is brought forward at stated intervals, and this account should not, under any circumstances, be neglected, for it may happen in a large business, where heavy sums are continually being received and paid, that from some cause or other the account may hastily be overdrawn, occasioning annoyance, when perhaps a large sum is lying in the bank to a deposit account.

Furniture or Property.—This account consists of sums paid for furniture, books, &c., for office purposes, and an amount should be credited to it at intervals for wear and tear, such amount debited to profit and loss, and the balance brought forward.

List of Debtors and Creditors.—This is not strictly an account, and in a ledger it has somewhat the air of an intruder. It is a list of debts due to and from the solicitor, collected from the balances of the various accounts in the ledger, and is very useful for frequent reference, so that debtors at least may not be forgotten. The totals are carried to the quarterly or half-yearly

Balance, which consists of all the balances brought at the time of balancing to the debit side of the ledger and private ledger, and cash in hand, distinguished as assets; and all the balances brought at the same time to the credit side of those books marked as liabilities. If the bookkeeping has been correct, the totals of the two columns will be equal. It is important that a trial balance should be taken at fixed intervals, and immediately upon the date which has been so fixed, for if any time is allowed to elapse entries will have been made both in cash book and ledger which will make it awkward to balance the books at the date which has been decided upon, and the longer a balance is postponed the more difficult it will be to discover and rectify any error which may have been made in the posting, additions, or otherwise.

All the entries to the various accounts mentioned may be carried through the cash book if it be thought fit to do so, but except where cash is actually received and paid it is a superfluous operation, as the double entry is complete without that formality.

Entries may be carried through Cash Book if preferred.

The list of debtors and creditors and the balance sheet may be kept out of the private ledger if preferred, and either copied into a book set apart for them, or, what is as well, on foolscap sheets, regularly endorsed and numbered.

List of debtors and creditors.

It will be readily seen that all the accounts named may be kept with the general accounts of the business, and it is therefore quite a matter of choice whether the ledger shall consist of one volume or two.

RÉSUMÉ

AS REGARDS BOOKS RELATING TO CASH ACCOUNTS.

The total number of books which have been described is as follows:—

1. Postage and Call Book.
2. Sheets, or Day Book.
3. Bill Book.
4. Voucher Book.
5. Disbursement Book.
6. Index to Bills delivered.
7. Cash Received.
8. Cash Book.
9. Ledger.
10. Private Ledger.

Total number of books.

Some of these possess entirely new features, but yet they have been a sufficient time in use, and under circumstances which have thoroughly tested their efficiency, to warrant their recommendation, and the whole of them combined have been found to answer the end of good and accurate bookkeeping without a useless expenditure of time or labour. Their scope and intention have been described in the preceding pages, and instructions have been given for the daily use and treatment of them, which will bear some amplification as regards those relating to cash accounts.

Further directions as to
Cash Received.

Cash Received, as an auxiliary book, has been found very useful in practice. It serves several purposes: to collect items for the cash book; to show and verify the receipt of cash; to present the totals paid into the bank, vouched by the initials of the person so paying them; and to preserve the neatness of the cash book. This book should be always at hand, and immediately a sum of money is received in the course of business, the amount, with particulars, should be entered in it by the person acting as cashier, whether principal or clerk. If he should be absent, then whoever receives money ought to make the entry, and the cashier, looking at the book on his return, will see the entry, and if the money be not handed to him at once, he should make inquiries respecting it. Daily, or as often as the amount becomes sufficiently large, he will add up the sums received, insert the total, pay it into the bank, and append a note with his initials against it, stating that he has done so, as shown in the example at page 145. Thus, if all moneys received are paid into a bank, by the use of this book misappropriation will be detected at once, unless money be received and no entry made of it at all—a contingency against which there can be no positive protection. And if payments are made partly by cheque and partly by cash, the book is still as useful, both as a record and as a guard, for in that case the cashier's note and initials would state the amount reserved for payments, and the amount paid into a bank; the two forming the total of the receipts. The counterfoil of the cheque book should contain full and necessary particulars of the payment, as to which ample instructions have already been given. "Cash Received," therefore, showing details of sums received, and the cheque book those of sums paid, both will daily, or at least very often, be posted into the

Cash Book, where, if found necessary, the items may Cash Book. be enlarged, and a fuller explanation given of them. This book should not be allowed to get into arrear, and whenever a folio becomes filled, the columns should be added up and carried forward, and no postponement of such additions should be tolerated. As soon as the daily entries have been made in the cash book, they should be posted into the Ledger, taking care to mark in each the folio from Ledger. which the entry is brought, and also the folio to which it is carried—an important precaution, which will show when an item has been overlooked. In posting this book, it should be borne in mind that the items on the right hand page of the cash book are entered on the left hand page of the ledger, and vice versâ, the reason of which has been already explained. Whenever an account in the ledger will balance, both debit and credit page should be added up, leaving the folio clear for further entries to the same account; and a little attention given to this matter occasionally will save much time in preparing the periodical balance sheets. Always be careful to index a client's name immediately an account is open to him; give full, not verbose, but explicit details of each transaction; be careful in dealing with transfers and double entries; keep the book neatly and methodically; and it will at all times be a valuable one to which to refer for information of past events relating to monetary affairs, as the bill book will be for general transactions; and it should be borne in mind as a fact ascertained by experience, that time and money will be gained by a strict attention to books and accounts. The same rules also apply to the Private Ledger, which, as has been remarked, is Private Ledger. similar to the ledger, except in the class of accounts for which it is reserved, and which has been sufficiently described. At stated intervals, a trial balance should be taken to ascertain that each and every entry has been properly posted, and that the additions and figures are correct; and this precaution should not be postponed or neglected, for the oftener such a balance is taken, the easier it will be to take it. By following these and the previous instructions, there can be no doubt that any intelligent person will be quite able to perform all the ordinary operations of bookkeeping.

Books that may be omitted.

It now only remains to show how many of the books may be omitted, if the whole should be thought too many. It has already been shown that the day book, voucher book, disbursement book and index to bills delivered, may be dispensed with, to which list "Cash Received" and Private Ledger are now added—though it must not be understood that such wholesale excisions are recommended—and all these being left out there will only remain the following number:—

1. Postage and Call Book.
2. Bill Book.
3. Cash Book.
4. Ledger.

Effects of their omission.

The effect of the omission of all but "Cash Received" and the Private Ledger has been mentioned at page 27, and as to those two, whether a private ledger is kept or not is quite immaterial, it being but a division of the ledger, but as regards "Cash Received," of course, if it be not kept, the checks upon misappropriation will be absent, and amounts received will have to be carried direct into the cash book, in all probability sullyng its neatness; but if the disbursement book be rejected that will be a small matter, because it will be in continual use for the record of petty payments. It is possible that a very small practice may be conducted with these four books only, and, by using great care, efficiently; but if the business should become more extensive, it would be found necessary to increase the number. But the plan has been arranged so that any book of the series may be left out, or adopted, as may be found convenient. It may be taken as granted, though it seems strange, that when only three or four books are kept, greater care and attention are necessary in keeping them than when a larger number is used, but it must be remembered that the three or four are really made to do double duty.

A few remarks as to the general effect of the exclusion of any of the books described will not be out of place, in order to enable an opinion to be formed as to the expediency of dispensing with the services of one or more of them.

A Call Book,* giving more particulars than the form generally used gives, is necessary, but at all events some sort of a book, noting calls, &c., is indispensable. With its assistance, in a small business it is possible, by carefulness and rigid punctuality, to do without Day Books if the bill book be posted daily, by turning to each client's account in it, and entering the charges for business which has been done for him in the course of the day. But such a routine will not bear any interruption or neglect, and if allowed to get only for a short time in arrear, many items will certainly be overlooked or forgotten, occasioning a loss which, by repetition, becomes serious. But in a practice where there are several partners, or where there are many clerks, each entrusted with the management of a separate class of business, sheets, day books or some medium for collecting the charges for business done by each person for the bill book, must be employed; for any attempt under such circumstances to carry charges to it direct would assuredly result in confusion and loss.

able one, but may be dismissed without further loss than the saving of time frequently effected by a reference to the information which it affords in a condensed and available shape, especially as regards the costs outstanding, bills for which have been delivered, but not paid.

Voucher Book. The Voucher Book, also purely auxiliary, need not be used except in large offices, where it is very useful to a cashier, but it does not form a necessary portion of any system.

Disbursement Book. But with the *Disbursement Book it is very different, for its functions are really important, and its connection with the other books is intimate and distinct. It relieves the cash book of petty payments, and by its correspondence with the bill book ensures that all payments are included in bills of costs. It also separates those payments which are made on account of costs from those which properly belong to cash accounts, and both from those which are simply office expenditure, and which cannot be charged to any account but to the debit of profit and loss. And here it may be remarked, that all payments which are to be included in a bill of costs should pass through the disbursement book, and from thence to the bill book. If the amount be very heavy, a cheque can be drawn specifically for it, and treated in the same manner as the other sums received by the cashier for petty disbursements. By excluding such advantages, and passing all payments large or small through the cash book, the disbursement book may be dispensed with, and so may the book styled Cash Received, if it should be determined to do without the checks it affords, and to enter all receipts into the cash book direct, or if such receipts are so few in number as not to require any intermediate record. The use of the Private Ledger, that book being but a branch of the ledger, is not advised only in exceptional cases; and thus the total number of books recommended as necessary in a solicitor's business is but nine. Four of these—namely, call book, bill book, cash book, and ledger, must be kept under any circumstances; and to these, even in a small business, it would be found advisable, and in the end better, to add two more, the disbursement book, and sheets, or day book; thus increasing the number to six.

The conclusion, therefore, arrived at is this: it is just possible to conduct a business with four books; it will be better conducted by the aid of six; and still more conveniently and orderly by employing all the nine, of which examples and descriptions have been given.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

General remarks.

THOSE books which are absolutely necessary to a solicitor's business, and also those which, as auxiliaries, contribute much to order and convenience, have been discussed, and it only remains to add a few general observations and instructions in conclusion. One maxim, the truth of which is incontestable, should never be lost sight of—a clear and accurate system of accounts is an almost indispensable element in business success. It avails little to discuss the amount of time necessary for proper bookkeeping. It is contended that this consideration is paramount—whether much or little time is occupied, such work ought to be done, and well done. But, in fact, time is really saved by a proper attention to costs and accounts. When annoyance is felt at the immediate expense incurred and time taken up, it is not considered how often many hours are lost and the services of clerks wasted in searching for notes, memoranda, or documents, to elucidate past occurrences, which a minute's reference to a bill book or ledger properly posted would have rendered perfectly clear. And the actual pecuniary loss arising from careless accounts is by no means inconsiderable. Disbursements are frequently made which are overlooked in making out and sending in a bill of costs when they are not systematically recorded, and a ready reference provided to them; and it is not too much to say that the loss arising from these and other sources would not only pay an accountant and bill clerk, whose labours would preserve order and contribute to comfort, but would also leave a very large surplus in favour of profit.

It may be objected that the system discussed includes too many books, but some of them, as has been shown, may be dispensed with; though whether anything would be gained by limiting the number is questionable. And it may also be objected that the plan delineated of making transfers in the ledger, without passing them through the cash book, or keeping, as some accountants recommend, a journal, may lead to such entries being overlooked, but no system can provide against carelessness or negligence, and if ordinary care be taken, such omissions cannot occur; but if they do, will be detected by the most cursory examination. Yet, if insisted upon, a journal may be kept, or any other additional books, such as a book in which to fair-copy bills of costs delivered, for they will readily adapt themselves to the other parts of the system, and at the best will do no harm, and at the worst serve to occupy a leisure hour. As to the plan of passing such entries through the cash book, it is as undesirable in a solicitor's office as the attempt to introduce ledger accounts, such as profit and loss, bank, and others, into it; and if this be done with a view to separate a solicitor's money from his client's, an examination of the cash book and ledger described will show that such separation is as effectually and more simply accomplished by them in a legitimate manner. A profit and loss account which is kept in a cash book will not answer every required purpose, for if it be desired to keep the profits of each year separate, and a bill is delivered, the contents of which embrace several years' business, then, in order to allot the proper proportion to each year, a profit and loss account must still be opened in the ledger.

A great deal is often written respecting the in- Double entry.

tricacies and technicalities of double entry in book-keeping, which is not so elaborate an affair as has been represented. Double entry means that one item is used as a check or counterpoise upon another, such as when a bill of costs is debited against a client, profit and loss is credited with the same amount, and thus, by taking a trial balance, enabling the correctness of the work to be ascertained beyond all doubt. It requires two or three additional accounts, such as capital, and profit and loss, to be opened in the ledger, but nothing more; and for all practical purposes the routine recommended is a system of double entry, but not more difficult to keep, nor involving more labour, than the old unsafe plan of single entry, if the directions given are strictly observed. Double entry also facilitates the preparation of a balance sheet, which, it need scarcely be said, is necessary in order that a solicitor may become acquainted with the true state of his affairs.

Commencement of a new system.

Instructions for commencing a new system.

When the accounts of an office have been imperfectly attended to or wholly neglected, and it has been determined to commence a new system, some care should be taken at such commencement, or the last state will be no better than the first. The first process will be to settle all bills of costs, so far as possible, debit them in the ledger to the clients from whom they are due, and open a profit and loss account, to which they must be credited. In the next place, adjust all cash accounts to the date of the commencement of the new system, prepare a balance sheet, having in one column assets and in the other liabilities, carry the balance of each individual account into the ledger, taking care to give full particulars and explanations, to the debit or credit of each client, as the case may be, and a sum, which will be shown by the balance sheet, necessary to equalize such debits and credits collectively (if, as no doubt will be the case, the result shows debts due to the solicitor in excess of those due from him) to the credit of capital account; because it is a balance of cash accounts, and strictly belongs to capital, while costs are credited to profit and loss. In these operations it will be observed that the object is to keep the cash book clear of all old matters, and as each entry in the ledger at this commencement will have had a counter-entry, cash to capital, and costs to profit and loss, the ledger will of course start balanced, and will at any time afterwards balance if the subsequent posting be correct. Any balance due from bankers will be credited in the cash book and debited to the bank account in the ledger, and any new capital introduced into the concern will be debited to cash and credited to capital. Let it be always borne in mind that to relieve the cash book of extraneous matter, which would act as a dead weight upon it and be confusing and out of place there, nothing more is necessary to ensure that the ledger shall balance than to take care that any entry made in that book, which has not passed through the cash book, shall have a corresponding, or double, entry to some other account. This is the necessary course to be taken in passing from an old system to a new one, and in a small business it could no doubt be managed without professional assistance; but where the transactions have been intricate, or extended, it would be advisable to employ the services of a law accountant, for frequently many questions arise which can only be answered by skill and experience.

Dual entries in Ledger.

It is in some offices expedient to have a reference always at hand to interests falling due on mortgages to clients, and also interests due from clients to their mortgagees. If it is not desired to increase the number of books by devoting one solely to such a purpose it will be sufficient if in any lawyer's diary the fact that such interest is due be noted on the day in which it falls due, adding particulars, so that when the day arrives the diary acts as an unfailing reminder, for, of course, no day will pass without its being consulted. These notes can be made at the commencement of each year, or half-year, and the materials for them furnished by a perusal of the register of mortgages, with which every office ought to be provided. As each amount is paid, the note can be run through with ink, and any arrears can be brought forward from time to time. The notes are readily accessible, and in a diary are always presenting themselves to the attention; but if the receipts of this class are numerous it will be better, perhaps, to keep a book in a suitable form for them, and such a form is given in the Appendix.

A Law Accountant should also be a good Costs Draftsman.

In solicitors' bookkeeping costs are so blended with cash accounts that it is highly expedient that a law accountant should be at the same time a tolerable, if not a thoroughly efficient, costs draftsman. But if at times a solicitor's books are in very indifferent order, it may safely be said that, as a rule, his bills of costs are drawn in a manner which would bear considerable improvement. Very often the drawing, or at least the settling, of a bill of costs is delayed till it becomes imperative that it shall be delivered immediately, and then the items are thrown together confusedly and unconnectedly, charges inconsiderately written against them, and the bill hastily delivered in a way which gives dissatisfaction to the client, because it is so disjointed he cannot understand it, and results in a loss to the solicitor, because much is omitted that might be inserted, and no proper explanation given even of that which is charged. If the precautions named when treating of the books relating to costs were observed this would not be the case, and the bill book would always present a continuous and clear narrative. But where a habit of neglect, which has become chronic, has left the materials for costs in confusion, perhaps a few hints as to the proper way to proceed in preparing a bill for hasty delivery may not be out of place. If the clerk who is assigned to the work have any method and skill in him at all, he will, under even disadvantageous circumstances, produce a decent bill if the following measures are adopted. It is presumed that in a diary, or some other book, there has been, however imperfect, minutes of attendances made, stating, if briefly and vaguely, their purport, and that the letters received have been preserved, and those written copied. He should then have such a diary and the letter book before him, and previous to commencing the bill he should read the notes of attendances and the correspondence, in order to obtain as clear an idea of the business as possible. He should then examine the call book, and take short notes of any attendances that may have been omitted in the diary, and it would be well if he could have a few minutes' conversation with the person who has conducted the business, by way of explanation. The papers relating to the matter should then be arranged in order of date, and if there are any briefs or cases for the opinion of counsel among them, such documents will give very useful information. Having in this way formed as clear an idea of the matter as he can, he will commence to draw the bill; in doing which he will find that the time spent in preliminary inquiries has not been wasted. He should now proceed to describe the occurrences as they arose in order of time, giving as full and explicit explanations as possible, and making the bill, in fact, an intelligible narrative of the matter to which it relates. He will, of course, refer to the means of information which are accessible to him, and state in condensed but clear terms the purport of the letters; for in the absence of entries of attendances these frequently explain that which may seem obscure, and also describe,

Instructions for drawing a bill of costs.

or advert to, interviews to which there may be no other clue. He will also refer to the papers for the length of documents, and to be certain that none are omitted to be charged for; and as to the proper charges, if he should be unacquainted with them, he can at once ascertain them from any good work on costs, say "Scott's," where they are presented in a short and tabular form, applicable to any description of business except Chancery, or Parliamentary, which are classes of bills no tyro should attempt to draw.*

By following this method intelligently a bill will be drawn which will not fall much short of what it ought to be; though, with every care taken under such circumstances, it will still be found that, considering both time and profit, it would have been far better to have made proper and business-like entries as the matter progressed. But in drawing a solicitor's bill of costs there are other points which require due discrimination and careful treatment. It not unfrequently happens that the payments are heavy and out of all proportion to the profits, and, as has been before observed, clients are in the habit of looking at the sum total and ascribing the whole to profit; and when they ask for an abatement their idea of a reduction is based upon such total, by which reasoning they really ask for a percentage upon cash which has been paid for them perhaps a long time, and which during that time has been unproductive to the solicitor. To avoid such a misapprehension it is a good plan to keep all the payments out of the body of the bill and give them in detail at the end, distinguished, of course, as payments, and distinct from the sum which properly belongs to profits, but in order that the narrative of the bill may not, by so doing, be interrupted, and for other reasons, it is best to write the words which relate to disbursements in their proper place but not carry out the amount into the money column, explaining the omission by the remark—"See payments, p. .". Of course in posting the bill into the ledger the book-keeper will have to do with the total only. The form of a bill book given, in conjunction with the disbursement book, will be found very useful in effecting such a separation. Sometimes also it is necessary to deliver a cash account with a bill of costs, and in that case some judgment is required as to the proper money transactions to be included in the latter and those which ought to appear in the former—an important consideration in view of a taxation. The rule is that such payments as the solicitor ought to make in the conduct of the business—for instance, fees of the officers of the court, expenses of witnesses, counsels' fees, payments for searches, stamp duty on conveyances, mortgages and other documents, agents' or correspondents' charges, expenses of journeys and similar disbursements, however heavy, printers' bills, &c.—belong to a bill of costs and are properly included in it; but such payments as it is not customary for a solicitor to make, unless his clients furnish him with the money to do so—for instance, money paid into court, costs to the opposing party, legacy or residuary duty, mortgage money, interest, purchase money, damages, insurance, or payments of a like description—ought to be debited in a cash account, and if the client pays to his solicitor a sum of money on account, say for counsels' fees, or any other disbursements enumerated as those which belong to costs, he should still charge the payment in his bill and give credit for the sum so received in his cash account; but if a sum be advanced towards any of those transactions which have been named as not belonging to his bill, both the receipt and payment should appear in the cash account. The form of disbursement book given is intended expressly to distribute business payments into their respective classes, and if proper care be taken in keeping it each will go without trouble into its proper place, and the bill book will at once furnish the costs, and the ledger the cash account. But it is not advisable that the latter should at all times be a verbatim copy of the ledger entries, and before an account is extracted which is intended for presentation to a client it should be ascertained if it needs revisal or pruning, for under certain circumstances entries are made in language intended for private perusal only, and sometimes there are sums on both sides which equal each other, and which possibly may be advantageously omitted, as by so doing the balance would not be affected.

Books rejected
as superfluous.

It has been endeavoured in these remarks, and throughout these pages, to describe a clear and concise plan of bookkeeping, unencumbered by useless books or confusing technicalities, and which is known from experience to be adapted to any kind of business, and to work well and satisfactorily. Books, such as a rough cash book, transfer book, agency ledgers and others, sometimes insisted on as indispensable, have been rejected as superfluous; though, as before observed, they may be imported into this system without disturbing it. Every book necessary for keeping accounts accurately and well in a solicitor's practice has been named and described, and it is hoped that the intention to impart at least such a rudimentary acquaintance with solicitors' bookkeeping as will be found useful has been successful; but these pages do not by any means profess to have laid out a royal road to a knowledge of the science, nor to have propounded a perfect system, for as a writer (Foster) on bookkeeping aptly observes, "however correct an art may be in theory, its practice is inevitably subject to errors; and no system of accounts is secure from the designs of the fraudulent, or the consequences of carelessness—from intentional neglect, or accidental perversion."

The same writer also very justly remarks, that "the science of bookkeeping is thought by many to be of easy attainment, and that little study or experience is requisite to give any one a competent knowledge of it. This, however, is so far from being true, that in complicated transactions, and more particularly in the adjustment of partnership accounts, questions daily arise which puzzle the clearest head, and to solve which requires the most intense effort of a sagacious and profound mind."

As regards perfection in a system of bookkeeping, those who claim it must be rashly self-confident. No man can positively assert that anything is perfect—he can only say it is the best that he has hitherto seen, for that which appears to be perfect to-day may, according to the law of progress, be demonstrated to be imperfect to-morrow. Self-experience and the communicated experiences of others are all we know at present, but beyond such an investigated field there probably lies an undiscovered region, researches in which may disturb preconceived ideas on any subject. This should be borne in mind when a system is praised as perfect. Nothing of the kind is claimed for the plan propounded in these pages, which is intended only to be simple, comprehensive and efficient, and experience warrants the assertion that it is so.

Concluding Remarks.

This Work has discussed the great advantages which result from passing all money through a bank, and the specimen Account Books have been framed to serve that purpose; but in any position where such a process is impracticable or not advisable, and where money is only partially paid through a bank, or not at all, then none of the books will require any alteration whatever in form, and will be kept in the same way; the only difference will be—if money be partially paid through a bank, the balance of cash, which in the specimen Account Books is shown to be in the bank, will be shown partly by the bank account and partly by the cash book—if no money be paid through a bank, then it will be shown wholly by the cash book—and when cheques are not drawn for expenses, then, if a disbursement book is kept, a sum will have to be transferred as often as necessary to that book from the cash book to meet such expenses, and debited to profit and loss. Subject to this remark, the arrangement and routine of the books are precisely the same in all cases.

Call and Postage Book.

THE CALL AND POSTAGE BOOK should be ruled and headed as shown in the annexed specimen. It should be of foolscap size, ruled horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width, and the vertical lines should be red. It may be bound in rough calf, and labelled on the back and front. It does not require an index, and may be made of any thickness, but about 150 pages is a convenient size.

In order to illustrate the working of the Call and Postage Book, it has not been thought necessary to give more than a specimen page ; but to that extent it corresponds with the other books of the series.

REMARKS.

WHERE there are several copying clerks, or more than one general clerk, it is not advisable to devote a separate book to each. One book is sufficient for the copying and general staff, but the manager of each department should have a day book, though if he have an assistant, or assistants, one book will serve for both manager and assistants ; taking care that one branch is not mixed with another. But where sheets are used then it is best to give one to each clerk, for when the sheets are collected negligence in making entries is at once fixed upon the proper person.

Except to ascertain the number of folios of documents a copying clerk's day book is of no great importance, for it is generally in a confused and unintelligible condition, and of course the manager of each department, or if he should fail to do so then the bill clerk, will make all necessary entries as to copies and engrossments.

No. III.

Bill Book.

THE BILL BOOK should be ruled and headed as shown in the annexed specimen. The size should be demy (foolscap is inconvenient, and not sufficiently large), ruled horizontally with blue lines more closely than usual, say five to the inch, and the vertical lines should be red. It may be bound in rough calf, and have labels on the back and front stating the number of the bill book, and also the year for which it is used. It should be type-paged (not folios), and be of such a thickness that one bill book shall last a year, so that for each year there will be a separate bill book. It should have an index, one letter to each opening.

All the bills in this Bill Book, with the exception of the unfinished bill from page 27 to 30, have been carried through the other books of account, when necessary, and correspond with them.

	Remarks. This last bill is left unfinished and is not taken into account with the balance, of which an example is given in the Private Ledger. There must of necessity be many matters always uncompleted in a solicitor's business whenever a balance is taken, and these unfinished bills should be estimated as closely as possible and the amount of such estimate, less an allowance according to circum- stances for bad debts and other deductions, will increase the assets. It will be observed that in the Bill Book blank spaces have been left at frequent intervals. Such spaces are intended for probable alterations or additions either in the course of the business or when a bill is settled, so as to obviate the neces- sity of drafting the bill.

Voucher Book.

THE VOUCHER BOOK should be ruled and headed as shown in the annexed specimen. It may be made of any size; post is convenient. The horizontal lines, of ordinary width, should be blue, and the vertical lines red. It does not require type paging, nor an Index, and it may be made of any thickness, and bound in any style that may be preferred.

In order to illustrate the working of the Voucher Book it has not been thought necessary to give more than a specimen page, but to that extent it corresponds with the Disbursement Book.

Disbursement Book.

THE DISBURSEMENT BOOK should be ruled and headed as shown in the following specimen. It should be of foolscap size, ruled horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width, and the vertical lines should be red. It may be bound in rough calf, labelled on back and front, and from 100 to 150 folios (not pages) in thickness. It does not require an Index.

This book corresponds with the other books of the series.

Index to Bills Delivered.

THE INDEX TO BILLS DELIVERED should be ruled and headed as shown in the annexed specimen. The size should be demy, the horizontal lines blue, but wider than usual, so as to avoid confusing the eye by crowding the matter, and the vertical lines red. It may be bound in rough calf and have a label on the front. One hundred folios (not pages) in thickness will be sufficient to last a large business for many years ; and, as the Bills are entered in Order of Date of Delivery, there should be a subsidiary alphabetical index.

This book corresponds with the Bill Book and Ledger.

Cash Received.

The Book styled CASH RECEIVED should be ruled and headed as shown in the following specimen. It should be of foolscap size, ruled horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width, and the vertical lines should be red. It may be bound in rough calf, labelled on back and front, and about 200 pages (not folios) in thickness. It does not require an Index.

This Book corresponds with the Cash Book.

Cash Book.

THE CASH BOOK should be ruled and headed as shown in the following specimen. It should be of foolscap size, ruled horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width, and the vertical lines should be red. If a separate column for dates should be preferred, one can easily be added to the left hand of each page, but the arrangement in the specimen is preferable, because more room is left for particulars, and the entries for each day are kept opposite to each other. It may be bound in rough calf, labelled on back and front, and be about 200 folios (not pages) in thickness. A Cash Book does not require an Index.

This Book corresponds with the Ledger and Private Ledger.

Ledger.

THE LEDGER should be ruled as shown in the following specimen. It should be of demy size (a small Ledger presents an undignified appearance), ruled horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width, and the vertical lines should be red. It may be strongly bound in rough calf, labelled on back and front, and be about 250 folios (not pages) in thickness. It should have an Index, one letter to each opening.

This Book corresponds with the other Books of the series.

Private Ledger.

THE PRIVATE LEDGER should be in size, ruling, index, and binding, similar to the Ledger, only the labels should be different. If it should be preferred, the accounts in both Ledger and Private Ledger may be kept in the former, the object of the latter being simply to keep certain accounts private ; but where such privacy is not thought necessary, then it is more convenient to keep all the accounts in one Ledger.

This Book corresponds with the other books of the series.

REMARKS.

UNDER exceptional circumstances it may be considered that the number of Books of which specimens have been given is too large, or it may be necessary to keep the accounts of an office with less. And this may be done efficiently, though not so conveniently, with a portion of them only ; for the system is constructed in such a manner that one, or more, Books may be omitted without injuring the accuracy of the accounts, though in a business of any magnitude the use of the greater number is advisable, as affording a constant and ready check upon misappropriation or negligence, and giving references and explanations which save time and contribute to good order.

The Books that may be dispensed with are :—

(No. 2) THE SHEETS OR DAY BOOK : but in their absence great care and attention must be given to the daily posting of the Bill Book, which may be done by a principal, or the managing clerk referring once a day to the Call and Postage Book, and entering in the Bill Book without delay to each client's account the letters, attendances and other business which has been transacted ; but such a process requires great exactness and punctuality, and will even then no doubt occasionally entail loss.

(No. 4) VOUCHER BOOK. This Book being intended simply for the convenience of a cashier may be omitted without any detriment whatever.

(No. 5) THE DISBURSEMENT BOOK. If the cash transactions and disbursements are few in number, this Book may be dispensed with ; but in that case the Cash Book must be encumbered with numerous petty entries, and the important divisions of expenses into classes will not be apparent.

(No. 6) INDEX TO BILLS DELIVERED. This Book being an assistant, or subsidiary, Book, intended to facilitate reference, may be omitted.

(No. 7) CASH RECEIVED. This Book may also be dispensed with if it be not thought desirable to have a check upon the payments to the bank account. If omitted, when money is received it must be entered direct into the Cash Book.

(No. 10) THE PRIVATE LEDGER. This Book being merely a subdivision of the Ledger, the accounts contained in it may quite as well be kept in the Ledger itself.

This reduces the minimum number of Books absolutely necessary to four, viz.:—

1. Call and Postage Book,
2. Bill Book,
3. Cash Book, and
4. Ledger,

by the aid of which it is possible to keep exact accounts; but the Books recommended for a medium business are :—

1. Call and Postage Book,
2. Sheets or Day Book,
3. Bill Book,
4. Disbursement Book,
5. Cash Book, and
6. Ledger.

Any of the others may be introduced or omitted as preferred, or as circumstances may prescribe.

APPENDIX,

Containing Specimens of Books relating to General Matters in a Solicitor's Office, and additional Forms of Account Books.

No. XI.
Index to Papers.

A Book in this form, or one similar to it, is very useful as a ready means for finding, without a troublesome search, Drafts of Deeds and other papers which are no longer in use, but to which it is necessary to refer. The Book may be of foolscap size, headed and ruled vertically as in the specimen folio upon pages 230 and 231, and horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width. To save writing, the whole Book may be an Index, and a proper proportion of folios should be allotted to each letter. In an extensive business separate receptacles ought to be provided for each department, and each receptacle subdivided into classes; thus, in the place reserved for Conveyancing documents there should be a compartment for Mortgages, another for Bonds, and so forth, and the other branches should be similarly treated. This, though advisable under any circumstances, need not absolutely be done in a limited practice, but in all cases each bundle of papers, or document, must be supplied with a number, in a conspicuous position, answering to that in the Index, and these numbers should range consecutively. Whenever a bundle of papers, or document, is required, it is only necessary to look at the client's name in the Index, when the particulars relating to it and the number by which it may be found are at once indicated. Deeds should of course have a place to themselves, and a Form of Register applicable to them follows the Index to Papers in this Appendix.

Index to

Client's Name.	Names of Parties.						Description of Document.
Amwell, George	Corbett & Amwell						Conveyance
Davis, James	Frisby to Davis						Mortgage
Hines, William	Hines ats. Dillon						Brief, &c.
Morris, Joseph	Mr. and Mrs. Druce and their Trustee						Settlement
Quain, Robert	Quain v. Serle						Bill, &c.
Underwood, Samuel	Underwood to Rose and others.. ..						Assignment
Yates, John	Yates v. Russell						Papers in the Matter ..

NO. XII.

Deed Register.

THE object of a Register of Deeds is to have a ready access to them whenever they are required, and also to act as a voucher for their return to Clients ; both of which purposes are effected by the number, as explained in the instructions relating to the Index to Papers, and by the last two columns on the right hand of the annexed form, which show the manner in which the Deeds are returned, and those columns should bear the signatures of the person receiving the Deed and the clerk or principal who gave it to him. Deeds, being valuable documents, ought to be kept in a safe place distinct from Papers, and the numbers relating to each should be of a different series. Whenever a Deed is received, or retained on the settlement of a purchase or other transaction, it should forthwith be entered in the register, and when such Deed is returned to the Client, or to any person authorized by him to receive it, the Register should be at hand, and the proper entries made and signatures attached ; for if the last three columns on the right hand are blank they of course show that the Deed is still in the Solicitor's possession. The Register may be of the same size as the Index to Papers ; have a similar Index ; be headed and ruled vertically as in the specimen folio upon pages 234 and 235, and horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width.

No. XIII.

Register of Rents, Interests, and Insurances.

WHEN it is considered desirable to present in a brief form the particulars and amounts of Rents, Interests on Mortgages, &c., and Insurances due, or about to fall due, during any quarter of the year, the specimen folio of a Book for that purpose given on pages 238 and 239 will be found useful. It may be of foolscap size, headed and ruled vertically as there shown, and horizontally with blue lines of ordinary width. The particulars of amounts accruing due in the course of a current quarter should be entered in this Book at the commencement of such quarter, and any arrears from the preceding period brought forward; and if the payments and other particulars are punctually noted a clear and condensed statement will always be presented, showing the amounts which have been paid, those which are still due, and any partial payments or arrears.

Such a form is not intended to apply to Insurance Agencies, nor to the Receipts of Rents of large Estates, nor to numerous Weekly Rents. Agents for Insurance Companies, when they are Solicitors, will find it necessary to have a form peculiar to themselves; the Rent Roll of an Estate will demand separate Books to keep, which is properly the work of an Estate Agent; and it is but very seldom indeed that Solicitors undertake the unprofitable and unpleasant work of collecting weekly rents, which is usually handed over to a Rent Collector.

If the Rents, Insurances, or Interests received in an office should be so numerous that it may be thought not advisable to keep them together they may easily be separated; a certain portion of one Book being set apart for each class, or a Book reserved solely for it; but, except in rare instances, it will be found that the form given will answer all the purposes that are required of it.

Rental Account.

If the Rents should demand a separate record, then a form is given at pages 242 and 243, which will be sufficiently comprehensive, except in cases where the rents of large estates are wholly received, and then, as has been remarked, different and exclusive Books are required which do not properly belong to Solicitors' Bookkeeping.

Such a form will also be found convenient to keep in sheets of post or foolscap paper, upon which to copy an account of rents received to be furnished to a client. As a Book of Reference it should be attended to in the same way as the Register of Rents, Interests, and Insurances.

A TABLE OF COSTS AND CHARGES applicable to ordinary transactions in a Bill required at a short notice. To give fuller details upon this subject would be best to consult the works of Scott, Dax, Sydney Smith and others, where directions precedents can do so, though they will not supply that knowledge and aptitude which costs unless it has been accepted as an authority, for some books are published which guides to the subject.

NOTES.

Note A, page 10.

IN the Appendix at pages 244 and 245 a form is given combining a Call and Postage and Clerk's Day Book in one, in a manner which may be found useful in an office of limited practice, where it is desirable to keep as few books as possible. Under such circumstances the Principal and Managing Clerk would keep a record of their attendances and of work done by them, and with such materials, and the Letter Book, a Bill of Costs may at any time be prepared, even if the posting of the Bill Book has been allowed to fall into arrear ; but such a combination of books would not be found to work well in a large office.

Note B, page 18.

The outer, or expenses, column in the Bill Book would be of no use where a Disbursement Book is not kept, and in that case it would be omitted ; and it might also be omitted if it should be considered that the correspondence with the Disbursement Book, so as to show that no payments which should be included in a Bill of Costs have been overlooked, or the comparison in each Bill between expenses and profits, are not advantages of sufficient importance to compensate for the space which the extra column occupies.

Note C, page 24.

IN the Appendix at pages 248 and 249 another form of a Disbursement Book will be found, suitable for a large business where the Principals may desire to know how much is periodically spent in different branches of office expenses which are purely loss—that is, which cannot be charged to Clients or included in Bills of Costs. The per-centage of such expenses upon profits varies greatly in different offices, and no standard can properly be named, because in some places a business can be conducted at a much less expense than in others ; but it is sometimes found that such expenditure is yearly increasing, and the source of such increase difficult to trace, in which case the enlarged form of a Disbursement Book would be useful in revealing the cause, besides enabling a comparison to be made annually between the amount of each branch of expenditure in different years. Such a form has been in use for some time in a very large office in the North of England, and is found to work satisfactorily.

Note D, page 25.

Instead of having a subsidiary Index the "Index to Bills of Costs Delivered" may be an Index from beginning to end, allotting a certain number of folios to each letter; but such an arrangement would not present the information furnished by this Book in so compact and convenient a shape as in the form shown at pages 139, 140, and 141.

Note E, page 42.

In the Appendix at pages 250 and 252 are two other specimens of a Cash Book on the same plan, but applicable to circumstances in which a Banking Account is not kept, or a Disbursement Book dispensed with.

Note F, page 59.

A form of a Postage Book is shown in the Appendix at page 246, by which the expenditure for postages is distributed, thus enabling the exact sum to be charged to each department. Such a form would be proper only in a large office where several public appointments are held, but in such offices it has been found very useful.

Note G, page 60.

In some offices there is a system of reserving the Disbursement Book for Office Expenses alone, and carrying the sums to be charged in Bills of Costs through the Cash Book. This simplifies the Disbursement Book, but complicates the Cash Book, and though it may be permissible under peculiar circumstances, and where receipts and payments pass only partially, or not at all, through a Bank, yet, as a rule, it is not an advisable course.

Note H, page 68.

In the Appendix at page 254 a scale of the most ordinary costs and charges is given, intended as an Assistant to a Clerk in drawing a common bill. To give a larger, or complete, scale would have far exceeded the limits or design of this work, but that which is given will be useful to an inexperienced person in drawing the usual bills which are daily occurring in a Solicitor's office.

Note I, page 105.

In this instance the outer, or expenses, column of the Bill Book includes Agency charges and Agency payments, as well as the country payments which alone will appear in the Disbursement Book; as all those expenses are a charge upon the country costs. In a Town office of course the Bill Book would be free from the entries relating to Agency charges.

Note K, page 132.

In some Solicitors' Ledgers accounts with the Clerks are kept, but this is not required, unless they are allowed to overdraw their salaries, or there are other circumstances which make it necessary that a Ledger Account should be opened with them; and when that is the case, or if an account in the Ledger should be preferred, the payment would not appear in the Disbursement Book, but pass through the Cash Book in the usual way. With Clerks who are paid weekly it would be absurd to open a Ledger Account.

Where the asterisks appear, and in the similar spaces in the book called "Cash Received," if the whole of the payments are not passed through a Bank, there should be a note, stating how much of the amount is paid into the bank, and how much kept in hand, and the entries in the Cash Book should be in accordance; that is, cash would be credited only with the amount paid into the bank.

Note M, pages 158, 159.

The spaces between each day's entries, as shown in the specimen Cash Book, were left for convenience, but they would be improper, or at all events not advisable, in an actual Cash Book. It is a good arrangement to keep the entries for each day opposite to each other, and not to leave any spaces between each day, except where the debits happen to exceed the credits, or vice versâ, in which case there must be a space in one of them. If the dates have a column to themselves one page is generally filled before the other, and if the debits and credits are mixed on one folio, or journalised, the result is confusion, or certainly a want of that clearness which exists when the receipts and payments are separated. But spaces, so far as they can properly be avoided, are not advisable in any book, though they really do no harm; for if an entry should be surreptitiously added, it would have to appear in so many corresponding books that detection would be certain. If the columns of a Cash Book are kept added up, interpolations are difficult, for the alteration of figures, or an erasure, however carefully made, becomes apparent to even a cursory glance.

Note N, page 174.

The references are to the Disbursement Book, Cash Book, or to another folio of the Ledger, or Private Ledger; but it is always apparent which is intended.

Note O, page 204.

In the Specimen Account Books the folios of the Private Ledger do not follow consecutively the folios of the Ledger; the latter ending at 13, and the former commencing at 101. This was done in order that the distinction between the two books, when consulting the references, should be quite clear.

THE END.

B. & J. COOMBS, WYATT & CO.,
LAW ACCOUNTANTS
AND Costs Draftsmen,

2, GRAY'S INN PLACE, GRAY'S INN, LONDON, W.C.

B. & J. C., W. & Co. draw and settle Costs of any description (for taxation, if necessary) from books, papers, or other materials, however meagre the record or particulars of the business may be.

They also post and balance Solicitors' Books; dispose of Cash Accounts which have fallen into arrear; adjust the Accounts of deceased Solicitors; prepare Balance Sheets, and Executors' and Administrators' Accounts; audit Partnership, or other, Accounts at stated periods for a fixed charge; and attend to the Accountancy business of Solicitors generally.

They also undertake to prepare Candidates for the Law Examinations in Bookkeeping.

The charges in the Costs department are either by commission or at a fixed daily or weekly rate, as may be preferred; and in the Accountants' department by the day or week; but in all cases such charges are moderate.

In the event of any difficulty arising from the entire or partial adoption of the system of Solicitors' Bookkeeping set forth in the preceding pages, the Author will, upon application being made to him, remove such difficulty and give all necessary explanations by correspondence, free of expense; or, he would, for his usual charges, attend personally at the office of any Solicitor who might determine upon adopting the system, commence it, by opening the accounts, and give such instructions for its continuance as will enable the books thereafter to be kept and balanced in a satisfactory manner.

A List of the prices of the various Books described is annexed. The Books may be obtained of B. & J. C., W. & Co. (who will furnish any particulars which may be required relative thereto), or of Messrs. Ash & Flint, Account Book Manufacturers, 49, Fleet Street, London, E. C.

All the Books are cheap in price ; made of good paper ; strongly bound in rough calf (except numbers 2 and 4, which are half bound in Basil cloth) ; the Ledgers and Bill Book of demy size, but they may be had foolscap, if preferred, and the remainder as described in the work. They are all type paged, or folioed, and have an Index, when necessary ; have printed headings ; are ruled according to the specimens ; and are gilt-lettered side and back.

In ordering any of the Books it is necessary to state the number of the Book required.

The forms of the Books are copyright.

"Now for the Laws of England (if I shall speak my opinion of them without partiality either to my profession or country), for the matter and nature of them, I hold them wise, just and moderate laws: they give to God, they give to Cæsar, they give to the subject what appertaineth. It is true they are as mixt as our language, compounded of British, Saxon, Danish, Norman customs. And surely as our language is thereby so much the richer, so our laws are likewise by that mixture the more complete."—LORD BACON.

Stephen's Commentaries.—Sixth Edition.

4 vols. 8vo., £4:4s. cloth.

MR. SERJEANT STEPHEN'S NEW COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND, partly founded on Blackstone. The Sixth Edition, by JAMES STEPHEN, LL.D., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, one of the Registrars of the Court of Bankruptcy, formerly Recorder of Poole, and late Professor of English Law at King's College, London.

"It would be impossible, without entering minutely into details, to notice at any length this most valuable work. It is one which cannot be too highly recommended, not only to the profession but to the general public. It is a great mistake to act upon the notion that the study of the law is a matter of interest to lawyers only. Now there is no work which gives a summary of the English law at once so exhaustive and intelligible to the general reader as this publication of Dr. Stephen. He has incorporated into it all those portions of Blackstone's great work which would at the present day be useful to the reader." Law Magazine.

"To redeem Blackstone from oblivion, it became necessary that his work should be edited by a lawyer as able and a scholar as graceful as Blackstone himself. Mr. Serjeant Stephen, more than twenty years ago, conceived the happy thought of introducing the necessary alterations into the text itself, and, as he says in his preface, 'interweave his own composition with it as freely as the purpose of general improvement it might seem to require.' The first edition was favorably received, acknowledged at once as an able reproduction of an invaluable treatise on English law, and has since passed rapidly through successive editions, till it has become the acknowledged students' text book, and is accepted by the critics as a standard work. Mr. James Stephen, a no less distinguished and painstaking legal writer than his father, has with equal skill and research, superintended the later editions, made the amendments rendered necessary by alterations in the law, and incorporated and commented upon recent statutes, judgments and decisions with as good an arrangement, as bold a grasp, and with as much felicity of style, adapted to and reading smoothly with that portion of Blackstone's text which still remains, as his predecessor in the same path; and the four volumes now published may be safely regarded as a full exposition and a sound authority on English law to the present time." Law Journal.

"This new edition of the well known Stephen's Commentaries deserves a cordial welcome, for few years have been more eventful in legislation than those which have passed since the publication of the fifth edition. The skill with which the new matter is incorporated with the old is particularly remarkable, and in spite of the incongruity of the materials, and the threefold authorship of Blackstone, Serjeant Stephen, and the present editor, the result is perfectly homogenous and satisfactory. Indeed the 'noting up' appears to have been done throughout with much ingenuity and industry, and the alterations, great and small, to have been made with excellent judgment. We have no doubt that the work will in its most recent shape retain all its original popularity. We very sincerely recommend this standard text book to all members of the profession. To the student it is simply invaluable, but it is also a useful companion to the most experienced lawyer." Solicitors' Journal.

"The popular notion of the study of law is, that it is dry. No person who reads these Commentaries will call it so. It is a fascinating book. After six editions, it is impossible to say anything new of a standard work like this. We can but repeat that Stephen's Blackstone is indispensable, not to the law student alone, but to all who take part in public affairs, and especially to magistrates, who ought to be examined in it before they are permitted to sit upon the bench. Nay, it may be affirmed that no gentleman can be considered properly educated unless he has acquired so much knowledge of the law of England as is contained in Blackstone noted up by Stephen." Law Times.

"How careful Mr. James Stephen, the present able editor, is to continue this work may by reference be ascertained. Mr. Serjeant Stephen, by his great ability, by his unwearied industry, his simplicity and clearness of diction has made himself the first tutor to English law students. With a knowledge of the existence of these Commentaries, the student need not ask, with what work am I to commence my legal studies? Here he will find every branch of English law ably treated on. Not only is the work an essential to the beginner, but it will be found of the greatest use at all times, as well after as before call or admission. Any praise on our part of such a work is wholly unnecessary; as we have before remarked, we feel assured we need do nothing more than announce a new edition, to cause an eager demand amongst all law students, and indeed amongst every one wishing to gain an insight into the laws of his country." Law Examination Reporter.

"A very valuable feature is the reference made to the cases on each point. This constitutes the work a law library on a small scale. It is a book which is indispensable to every student of the law, whilst practitioners will find it to their advantage to consult it frequently, since they will find therein the law laid down scientifically, concisely, and, above all, accurately." Irish Law Times.

Stephen's Questions on the New Commentaries.

8vo., 10s. 6d. cloth.

QUESTIONS FOR LAW STUDENTS on the SIXTH EDITION of MR. SERJEANT STEPHEN'S NEW COMMENTARIES on the LAWS of ENGLAND. By JAMES STEPHEN, LL.D., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"Nothing can be more useful than a series of questions on a book like Stephen's Blackstone, intended as it is principally for the use of students, and touching as it does on every branch of the law." Law Magazine.

Shelford's Law of Railways.—Fourth Edition by Glen.

In 2 thick vols. royal 8vo., 63s. cloth.

SHELFORD'S LAW of RAILWAYS; containing the whole of the Statute Law for the Regulation of Railways in England, Scotland and Ireland: with copious Notes of Decided Cases upon the Statutes, Introduction to the Law of Railways, and Appendix of Official Documents. Fourth Edition. By WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM GLEN, Barrister-at-Law, Author of the "Law of Highways," "Law of Public Health and Local Government," &c.

The First Volume (pp. 850) contains the whole of the Statute Law for the Regulation of Railways down to the 32nd Victoria, including the Carriers' Acts, Lord Campbell's Act, and every other Act having immediate relation to Railways in England, Scotland and Ireland, together with the whole of the Judicial Decisions upon each Statute; Introduction to the Law of Railways; and an Appendix of Official and other Documents and Information,

The Second Volume (pp. 950) contains the Consolidation Clauses Acts, and the Amending Acts, applicable to England, Scotland and Ireland, with the Decisions of the Courts upon each Act; and the Law relating to the Assessment of Railways to the Local Taxes.

From the LAW MAGAZINE.

"Though we have not had the opportunity of going conscientiously through the whole of this elaborate compilation, we have been able to devote enough time to it to be able to speak in the highest terms of the judgment and ability with which it has been prepared. Its execution quite justifies the reputation which Mr. Glen has already acquired as a legal writer, and proves that no one could have been more properly singled out for the duty he has so well discharged. The work must take its unquestionable position as the leading Manual of the Railway Law of Great Britain. The cases seem to have been examined, and their effect to be stated with much care and accuracy, and no channel from which information could be gained has been neglected. Mr. Glen, indeed, seems to be saturated with knowledge of his subject. The value of the work is greatly increased by a number of supplemental decisions, which give all the cases up to the time of publication, and by an index which appears to be thoroughly exhaustive."

From the LAW TIMES.

"Mr. Glen has done wisely in preserving that reputation, and, as far as possible, the text of Shelford—though very extensive alterations and additions have been required. But he has a claim of his own. He is a worthy successor of the original author, and possesses much of the same industry, skill in arrangement and astuteness in enumerating the points really decided by cited cases. But we have said enough of a work already so well known. It will have a place not in the library of the lawyer alone. It is a book which every railway office should keep on its shelf for reference."

From the LAW JOURNAL.

"Mr. Glen has modestly founded his work as a superstructure on that of Mr. Leonard Shelford, but he has certainly claims to publish it as a purely independent composition. The toil has been as great, and the reward ought to be as complete, as if Mr. Glen had disregarded all his predecessors in the production of treatises on railway law. Since the year 1864 he has been unceasingly engaged in collecting materials, and though he has been ready for the printer for some time, and has delayed the appearance of the volumes in the expectation of legislative changes in railway law, yet he has expended full five years of care and attention on his work. Let us hope that he will have no cause to think his labour has been in vain. At any rate we may venture to predict that Mr. Cunningham Glen's edition of Shelford on Railways will be the standard work of our day in that department of law."

From the JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

"Far be it from us to undervalue Mr. Shelford's labours, or to disparage his merits. But we may nevertheless be permitted to observe that what has hitherto been considered as the 'best work on the subject' (Shelford) has been immeasurably improved by the application of Mr. Glen's diligence and learning. Sufficient, however, has been done to show that it is in every respect worthy of the reputation which the work has always enjoyed. We feel little doubt that the credit of that work will be greatly increased by Mr. Glen's instrumentality, and that not only will he have ably maintained its reputation by his successful exertions, but that he will have added materially to it."

From the SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

"The practitioner will find here collected together all the enactments bearing on every possible subject which may come before him in connection with railways or railway travelling. Whatever questions may arise the lawyer who has this book upon his shelves, may say to himself 'It there has been any legislation at all connected with this branch of the subject I shall at once find it in Shelford,' and it needs not to be said that on this account the book will be a very 'comfortable' one to possess. The collection is equally exhaustive in the matter of rules, orders, precedents and documents of official authority. To sum up our review; as a collection of statutes and general information the work will prove extremely useful, because in these respects it is so perfectly exhaustive."

Bulley and Bund's Bankruptcy Manual.

12mo., cloth.

A MANUAL of the LAW and PRACTICE of BANKRUPTCY as Amended and Consolidated by the recent Statutes: with an APPENDIX containing the Bankruptcy Act, 1869; the Debtors Act, 1869; the Bankruptcy Repeal and Insolvent Court Act, 1869, and the unrepealed sections of the former Acts. Together with the new General Orders and Forms of Procedure of Mich. Term, 1869. By JOHN F. BULLEY, B.A., of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law, and J. W. WILLIS-BUND, M.A., LL.B., Caius Coll. Cam., Chancellor's Legal Medallist 1867, Professor of Constitutional Law, University College London, and of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

Shelford's Companies.—2nd Edit. by Pitcairn and Latham.

8vo., 21s. cloth.

SHELFORD'S LAW OF JOINT STOCK COMPANIES; containing a Digest of the Case Law on that subject; the Companies Acts, 1862, 1867, and other Acts relating to Joint Stock Companies; the Orders made under those Acts to regulate Proceedings in the Court of Chancery and County Courts, and Notes of all Cases interpreting the above Acts and Orders. Second Edition, much enlarged, and bringing the Statutes and Cases down to the date of publication. By DAVID PITCAIRN, M.A., Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, and of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law; and FRANCIS LAW LATHAM, B.A., Oxon, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, author of "A Treatise on the Law of Window Lights."

Davis's Law of Registration and Elections.

One small 12mo. vol., 15s. cloth.

MANUAL OF THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF ELECTIONS AND REGISTRATION. Comprising all the Statutes, with Notes and Introduction, and a Supplement containing the Cases on Appeal down to 1869, the Rules relating to Election Petitions, and a complete Index to the whole Work. By JAMES EDWARD DAVIS, Esq., Barrister at Law, Author of "Manual of Practice and Evidence in the County Courts," &c.

"A work, which, in our judgment, is the handiest and most useful of the manuals which the Reform Act of 1867 has brought into existence."

—Law Magazine.

"We think this the best of the now numerous works on this subject. It has a great advantage in its arrangement over those which are merely new editions of works published before the recent legislation. To read through consecutively, in order to obtain a fair mastery of the whole subject, we have no hesitation in highly recommending this work."—Solicitors' Journal.

"No one comes forward with better credentials than Mr. Davis, and the book before us seems to possess the qualities essential to a guide to a discharge of their duties by the officials. The scheme of Mr. Davis's work is very simple."—Law Journal

THE SUPPLEMENT may be had separately, price 3s. sewed.

Davis's Law of Master and Servant.

12mo. 6s. cloth.

THE MASTER AND SERVANT ACT, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 141), with an Introduction, copious Notes, Tables of Offences, and Forms of Proceedings, prepared expressly for this Work. By JAMES E. DAVIS, Esq., Barrister at Law, Stipendiary Magistrate, Stoke-upon-Trent.

"* Besides the Act and copious Notes, Introduction, and a variety of Forms of Summons, Orders, Convictions, Recognizances, &c., specially prepared for this work, Tables have been framed classifying all the offences within the jurisdiction of Justices. It is hoped that this will be found useful, not only to Magistrates and their Clerks, but to the Legal Profession generally, for in consequence of the new Act not describing the offences, but merely referring to a schedule of seventeen former Acts, it is very difficult to say what cases are or are not within the purview of the new Act. The decisions of the Superior Courts, so far as they are applicable to the present law, are also given."

Fisher's General Law of Mortgage.—Second Edition.

Two vols. royal 8vo., 55s. cloth.

THE LAW OF MORTGAGE, and other Securities upon Property. By WILLIAM RICHARD FISHER, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law. Second Edition, very considerably enlarged.

"For a length of time it has been received as the best text book on the law of mortgages, and it has recently received the honours of a second edition. We have never been niggards towards Mr. Fisher's very laborious, learned and useful treatise, and we still see no reason to retract those commendations or to reduce their measure. His book thoroughly deserves the character it has won of being the only good and complete repertory we have of the law of mortgages, and other securities upon property."—Law Magazine.

"The second edition of this book, comprised in two volumes of royal octavo, has little beyond its paternity to identify it with the original volume which appeared in 1856. If we speak of the author's first essay as merely tentative and meagre and partial, it is only to draw particular attention to the very complete arrangement and copious detail of the edition now before the public . . . and we doubt not that the excellence of the work will receive its due appreciation at the hands of the profession. A word in conclusion is due to the clearness and simplicity which pervades Mr. Fisher's writing. If his language is too often bold and devoid of grace it is never obscure, and we think that the absence of attractive composition will not in these days be accounted a demerit in a treatise designed solely for professional purposes, which possesses the essential qualities of accurate learning and lucid arrangement."—Law Journal.

"The labour bestowed upon it by Mr. Fisher will be best understood by this fact. The mere list of cases cited in the text fills forty-three pages in double columns, and the list of statutes and orders cited occupies fifteen pages. We conclude by commending this work equally to the practitioner and the student; it will be invaluable to the former for reference, to the latter for reading and digesting."—Law Times.

Coote's Admiralty Practice.—Second Edition.

8vo., 16s. cloth.

THE PRACTICE of the HIGH COURT of ADMIRALTY of ENGLAND: also the Practice of the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council in Admiralty Appeals, with Forms and Bills of Costs. By HENRY CHARLES COOTE, F.S.A., one of the Examiners of the High Court of Admiralty, Author of "The Practice of the Court of Probate," &c. Second Edition, almost entirely re-written, with a Supplement giving the County Courts Jurisdiction and Practice in Admiralty, the Act of 1868, Rules, Orders, &c.

THE SUPPLEMENT containing the COUNTY COURT PRACTICE IN ADMIRALTY is complete in itself and may be had separately, 2s. sewed.

* * * This work contains every Common Form in use by the Practitioner in Admiralty, as well as every description of Bill of Costs in that Court, a feature possessed by no other work on the Practice in Admiralty.

"Mr. Coote, being an Examiner of the Court, may be considered as an authoritative exponent of the points of which he treats. His treatise is, substantially considered, everything that can be desired to the practitioner."—Law Magazine.

"The book before us is a second and enlarged edition of a work on the Practice of the Admiralty Court, written by the author some ten years ago. It is, however, a great improvement on its predecessor, being much fuller and more systematically arranged, and containing greater facilities for reference. The first part of the book is a treatise on the practice of the Court, which appears to us to be very carefully done, and to go thoroughly into the subject. The second part is a similar treatise on the practice of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Admiralty matters, written on the same system as the former part. The appendix contains a large number of common forms and precedents of pleadings used in the Court of Admiralty, together with bills of costs. Altogether Mr. Coote has done his work very carefully and completely, and we think his labours will be duly appreciated by Admiralty practitioners."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The first edition of this excellent work was produced for the purpose of illustrating the practice of the High Court of Admiralty, just then subordinated to the 'Rules of 1859' drawn up by the late distinguished Judge. Since then several important changes have been carried out, both in the matter of an extended jurisdiction and of practice. These changes it has been Mr. Coote's object to incorporate in the present edition of his work. In addition he has increased the utility of his book by a chapter on the practice of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Admiralty Appeals, and by a copious set of Admiralty precedents, in which it is the author's hope and belief that no necessary common form has been omitted. The present edition appears very seasonably."—Shipping and Mercantile Gazette.

"Mr. Coote has the great advantage of experience; he has long been a practitioner in the court as a proctor; he is consequently familiar with those minutiae of practice which mark the distinction between the student and the practical man.

"Mr. Coote is a successful writer upon the Practice of the Probate and the Admiralty Courts. His book on the former has reached a fifth edition, and the volume before us is a second edition."—Law Times.

Hunter's Suit in Equity.—Fourth Edition.

Post 8vo. 10s. cloth.

AN ELEMENTARY VIEW of the PROCEEDINGS IN A SUIT IN EQUITY. With an Appendix of Forms. By SYLVESTER J. HUNTER, B.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law. Fourth Edition, by G. W. LAWRENCE, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.

"It is now ten years since Mr. Hunter's modest and unpretending volume first saw the light, and few we imagine have been the students of equity practice during those years who have not been indebted to its pages for their first initiation into the mysteries of the Court of Chancery. We will only add that we are glad to find this little work is in such good hands, and while it continues to receive from time to time Mr. Lawrence's careful revision, we venture to predict for it a long-lived success and many future editions."—Law Journal.

"An outline, after this fashion, of a suit in equity is contained in Mr. Hunter's little volume, and that it has been found to perform its province is proved by its arrival at a fourth edition. Mr. Lawrence has added a chapter on the equitable jurisdiction of the county courts."—Law Times.

"This book has now maintained for so long a time the position of a standard manual for the use of law students, that there is little for us to say respecting its general scope. The work is intended for beginners, and the design is excellently carried out. Everything is there which ought to be placed before the learner, and yet the book is not encumbered with references and details which would serve merely to embarrass him; the arrangement is also very clear."—Solicitors' Journal.

Kerr's Action at Law.—Third Edition.

12mo., 13s. cloth.

AN ACTION AT LAW: being an Outline of the Jurisdiction of the Superior Courts of Common Law, with an Elementary View of the Proceedings in Actions therein. By ROBERT MALCOLM KERR, Barrister at Law; now Judge of the Sheriff's Court of the City of London. Third Edition.

"There is considerable merit in both works (John William Smith's and Malcolm Kerr's); but the second (Kerr's) has rather the advantage, in being more recent, and published since the Common Law Procedure Act, 1850."—Jurist.

"Mr. Kerr's book is more full and detailed than that of Mr. John William Smith, and is therefore better adapted for those who desire to obtain not merely a general notion but also a practical acquaintance with Common Law Procedure."—Solicitors' Journal.

"As a Third Edition the volume needs no description and permits no criticism. Enough to say that its present appearance will amply sustain the reputation it had already acquired."—Law Times.

"This is just the book to put into a Student's hand when he enters the legal profession. We have had occasion more than once to recommend it to the notice of our junior brethren."—Legaleian.

Tomkins' Institutes of Roman Law.

Part I. royal 8vo. (to be completed in Three Parts) 12s. cloth.

THE INSTITUTES OF THE ROMAN LAW. PART I. The Sources of the Roman Law and its external History to the decline of the Eastern and Western Empires. By FREDERICK TOMKINS, M.A., D.C.L., Barrister-at-Law, of Lincoln's Inn.

"This work promises to be an important and valuable contribution to the study of the Roman Law."—Law Magazine.

"Of all the works on the Roman Law we believe this will be the best suited to law students. Mr. Tomkins gives us a simple English history of Roman Law, arranged most lucidly with marginal notes, and printed in a form calculated for easy reading and retention in the memory. We welcome the book of Mr. Tomkins. It is calculated to promote the study of Roman Law; and both at the Universities and in the Inns of Court it is a work which may safely and beneficially be employed as a text book."—Law Times.

"This work is pronounced by its author to be strictly elementary. But in regard to the labour bestowed, the research exercised, and the materials brought together, it seems to deserve a more ambitious title than that of an elementary treatise. The chapter on legal instruction, detailing the systems of legal education pursued in the various epochs of Rome, reflects great credit on the author, and so far as we know is purely original, in the sense that no preceding English writer has collated the matter therein contained."—Law Journal.

"Mr. Tomkins has chosen his subject wisely in at least one respect, there can be no doubt that a good introductory treatise on the Roman law is sorely needed at present. The present part is only an instalment. But the present part is unquestionably both valuable in itself and of good promise for the future. We know of no other book in which anything like the same amount of information can be acquired with the same ease. We shall look with great interest for the publication of the remainder of this treatise. If the second part is as well executed as the first and bears a due proportion to it, we think the work bids fair to become the standard text book for English students."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The study of this volume is necessary to all who wish to be properly acquainted with the history and literature of the Roman law."—Irish Law Times.

"Mr. Tomkins has produced a book that was long needed."—Law Examination Reporter.

Ingram's Law of Compensation.—2nd Edit. by Elmes.

Post 8vo., 12s. cloth.

COMPENSATION to LAND and HOUSE OWNERS: being a Treatise on the Law of the Compensation for Interests in Lands, &c. payable by Railway and other Public Companies; with an Appendix of Forms and Statutes. By THOMAS DUNBAR INGRAM, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law, now Professor of Jurisprudence and Indian Law in the Presidency College, Calcutta. Second Edition. By J. J. ELMES, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law,

"We say at once that it is a work of great merit. It is a concise, clear and complete exposition of the law of compensation applicable to the owners of real property and railway and other companies."—Law Magazine.

"Whether for companies taking land or holding it, Mr. Ingram's volume will be a welcome guide. With this in his hand the legal adviser of a company, or of an owner and occupier whose property is taken, and who demands compensation for it, cannot fail to perform his duty rightly."—Law Times.

"This work appears to be carefully prepared as regards its matter. This edition is a third larger than the first; it contains twice as many cases, and an enlarged index. It was much called for, and doubtless will be found very useful to the practitioner."—Law Magazine, second notice.

Mr. Justice Lush's Common Law Practice.—Third Edition by Dixon.

2 vols. 8vo., 46s. cloth.

LUSH'S PRACTICE of the SUPERIOR COURTS of COMMON LAW at WESTMINSTER, in Actions and Proceedings over which they have a common Jurisdiction: with Introductory Treatises respecting Parties to Actions; Attornies and Town Agents, their Qualifications, Rights, Duties, Privileges and Disabilities; the Mode of Suing, whether in Person or by Attorney in Formâ Pauperis, &c. &c. &c.; and an Appendix, containing the authorized Tables of Costs and Fees, Forms of Proceedings and Writs of Execution. Third Edition. By JOSEPH DIXON, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"This is an excellent edition of an excellent work. He has effected a most successful 'restoration.' Altogether, both in what he has omitted and what he has added, Mr. Dixon has been guided by sound discretion. We trust that the great and conscientious labours he has undergone will be rewarded. He has striven to make his work 'thorough,' and because he has done so we take pleasure in heartily recommending it to every member of both branches of the profession."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Lush's Practice is what Tidd's Practice was in our days of clerkship, and what Archbold's Practice was in our early professional days—the practice in general use, and the received authority on the subject. It was written by Mr. Lush when he was only a junior rising into fortune and fame. His practical knowledge, his clearness and industry, were even then acknowledged, and his name secured for his work an immediate popularity, which experience has confirmed and extended. But the work was, in its turn, productive of considerable advantage to the author, it largely increased the number of his clients. When new editions were called for, Mr. Lush was too occupied with briefs to find time for the preparation of books, and hence the association of his name with that of Mr. Dixon as editor, and by whom the new edition has been produced. Mr. Dixon reminds us that twenty-five years have passed since Mr. Lush made his appearance as an author, and vast indeed have been the changes the law has since witnessed. So numerous are they, that the editor has found it the most convenient course to ignore, as it were, the second edition, to take the text of the original work as it came fresh from Mr. Lush's pen, and to mould that to the present practice. He is thus enabled to assure the reader, that for every alteration in, or addition to, the text, he alone is responsible. The index is very copious and complete. Under Mr. Dixon's care Lush's Practice will not merely maintain, it will largely extend its reputation."—Law Times.

"The profession cannot but welcome with the greatest cordiality and pleasure a third edition of their old and much valued friend 'Lush's Practice of the Superior Courts of Law.' Mr. Dixon, in preparing this edition, has gone back to the original work of Mr. Justice Lush, and, as far as the legislative changes and decisions of the last twenty-five years would allow, reproduced it. This adds greatly to the value of this edition, and at the same time speaks volumes for Mr. Dixon's conscientious labour."—Law Journal.

Brabrook's Co-operative and Provident Societies.

12mo. 6s. cloth.

THE LAW relating to INDUSTRIAL and PROVIDENT SOCIETIES, including the Winding-up Clauses, with a Practical Introduction, Notes, and Model Rules, to which are added the Law of France on the same subject, and Remarks on Trades Unions. By EDWARD W. BRABROOK, F.S.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law, Assistant Registrar of Friendly Societies in England, and Chief Clerk in the Registration Office.

"Mr. Brabrook's little work on these societies is opportune, and the statistics and information contained in it are valuable and interesting. There is a chapter devoted to practical advice, in which are contained many valuable and important hints."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Brabrook brings not merely official knowledge of his legal position as the barrister recently appointed to assist Mr. Tidd Pratt, Registrar of Friendly Societies in England, but the devotion of many years to a practical study of our industrial and provident institutions."—Post.

"The author speaks with practical experience and authority."—Advertiser.

"The clear exposition made by Mr. Brabrook in this volume supplies all the requisite information, and persons interested in the subject will do well to consult its pages."—News of the World.

Rouse's Practical Conveyancer.—Third Edition.

Two vols. 8vo., 30s. cloth.

THE PRACTICAL CONVEYANCER, giving, in a mode combining facility of reference with general utility, upwards of Four Hundred Precedents of Conveyances, Mortgages and Leases, Settlements, and Miscellaneous Forms, with (not in previous editions) the Law and numerous Outline Forms and Clauses of WILLS and Abstracts of Statutes affecting Real Property, Conveyancing Memoranda, &c. By ROLLA ROUSE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law, Author of "The Practical Man," &c. Third Edition, greatly enlarged.

"The best test of the value of a book written professedly for practical men is the practical one of the number of editions through which it passes. The fact that this well-known work has now reached its third shows that it is considered by those for whose convenience it was written to fulfil its purpose well."—Law Magazine.

"This is the third edition in ten years, a proof that practitioners have used and approved the precedents collected by Mr. Rouse. In this edition, which is greatly enlarged, he has for the first time introduced Precedents of Wills, extending to no less than 116 pages. We can accord unmingled praise to the conveyancing memoranda showing the practical effect of the various statutory provisions in the different parts of a deed. If the two preceding editions have been so well received, the welcome given to this one by the profession will be heartier still."—Law Times.

"So far as a careful perusal of Mr. Rouse's book enables us to judge of its merits, we think that as a collection of precedents of general utility in cases of common occurrence it will be found satisfactorily to stand the application of the test. The draftsman will find in the Practical Conveyancer precedents appropriate to all instruments of common occurrence, and the collection appears to be especially well supplied with those which relate to copyhold estates. In order to avoid useless repetition and also to make the precedents as simple as possible, Mr. Rouse has sketched out a number of outline drafts so as to present to the reader a sort of bird's eye view of each instrument and show him its form at a glance. Each paragraph in these outline forms refers, by distinguishing letters and numbers, to the clauses in full required to be inserted in the respective parts of the instrument, and which are given in a subsequent part of the work, and thus every precedent in outline is made of itself an index to the clauses which are necessary to complete the draft. In order still further to simplify the arrangement of the work, the author has adopted a plan (which seems to us fully to answer its purpose) of giving the variations which may occur in any instrument according to the natural order of its different parts."—Law Journal.

"That the work has found favor is proved by the fact of our now having to review a third edition. This method of skeleton precedents appears to us to be attended with important advantages. To clerks and other young hands a course of conveyancing under Mr. Rouse's auspices is, we think, calculated to prove very instructive. To the solicitor, especially the country practitioner, who has often to set his clerks to work upon drafts of no particular difficulty to the experienced practitioner, but upon which they the said clerks are not to be quite trusted alone, we think to such gentlemen Mr. Rouse's collection of Precedents is calculated to prove extremely serviceable. We repeat, in conclusion, that solicitors, especially those practising in the country, will find this a useful work."—Solicitors' Journal.

Dixon's Law of Partnership.

1 vol. 8vo., 22s. cloth.

A TREATISE on the LAW of PARTNERSHIP. By JOSEPH DIXON, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law. Editor of "Lush's Common Law Practice."

"It is with considerable gratification that we find the subject treated by a writer of Mr. Dixon's reputation for learning, accuracy and painstaking. Mr. Lindley's view of the subject is that of a philosophical lawyer, Mr. Dixon's is purely and exclusively practical from beginning to end. We imagine that very few questions are likely to come before the practitioner which Mr. Dixon's book will not be found to solve. Having already passed our opinion on the way in which the work is carried out, we have only to add that the value of the book is very materially increased by an excellent marginal summary, and a very copious index."—Law Magazine and Review.

"Mr. Dixon has done his work well. The book is carefully and usefully prepared."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Mr. Dixon enters into all the conditions of partnerships at common law, and defines the rights of partners among themselves; the rights of the partnership against third persons; the rights of third persons against the partnership; and the rights and liabilities of individuals, not actually partners, but liable to be treated by third persons as partners."—The Times.

"We heartily recommend to practitioners and students Mr. Dixon's treatise as the best exposition of the law we have read, for the arrangement is not only artistic, but conciseness has been studied without sacrifice of clearness. He sets forth the principles upon which the law is based as well as the cases by which its application is shown. Hence it is something more than a digest, which too many law books are not: it is really an essay."—Law Times.

"He has evidently bestowed upon this book the same conscientious labour and painstaking industry for which we had to compliment him some months since when reviewing his edition of Lush's 'Practice of the Superior Courts of Law,' and, as a result, he has produced a clearly written and well arranged manual upon one of the most important branches of our mercantile law."—Law Journal.

"The matter is well arranged and the work is carefully executed."—Athenæum.

Oke's Game and Fishery Laws.—Second Edition.

12mo., 10s. 6d. cloth.

A HANDY-BOOK of the GAME and FISHERY LAWS; containing the whole Law as to Game, Licences and Certificates, Poaching Prevention, Trespass, Rabbits, Deer, Dogs, Birds and Poisoned Grain throughout the United Kingdom, and Private and Salmon Fisheries in England. Systematically arranged, with the Acts, Decisions, Notes, Forms, Suggestions, &c., &c. By GEORGE C. OKE, Author of "The Magisterial Synopsis," &c. &c. Second Edition.

"The first edition having enjoyed a rapid sale, a second has enabled Mr. Oke greatly to enlarge his design and to add the very important statutes which have been passed since the publication of the first edition. This is now really what it is termed, a Handy Book of the Game and Fishery Laws, and gives all the information that can be required by the sportsman or his legal adviser."—Law Times.

"The work is carefully composed, and contains a full index."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Care and Industry are all that can be shown in such productions, and these qualities are generally shown in the present works. Mr. Oke's book takes a somewhat larger range than Mr. Paterson's, as it embraces the late statute relating to the Salmon Fisheries."—Athenæum.

Glen's Poor Law Board Orders.—Sixth Edition.

Post 8vo. 18s. cloth.

The GENERAL, CONSOLIDATED, and other ORDERS of the POOR LAW COMMISSIONERS and the POOR LAW BOARD: with explanatory Notes elucidating the Orders, Tables of Statutes, Cases and Index to the Orders and Notes. By W. CUNNINGHAM GLEN, Esq., Barrister at Law. Sixth Edition.

Coote's & Tristram's Probate Practice.—5th Edition.

8vo., 24s. cloth.

THE PRACTICE of the COURT of PROBATE, in Common Form Business. By HENRY CHARLES COOTE, F.S.A., Proctor in Doctors' Commons, &c., &c. Also a Treatise on the Practice of the Court in Contentious Business, by THOMAS H. TRISTRAM, D.C.L., Advocate in Doctors' Commons, and of the Inner Temple. Fifth Edition, with great Additions, and including all the Statutes, Rules, Orders, &c., to the present time; together with a Collection of Original Forms and Bills of Costs.

"The profession will be glad to welcome the publication of this most valuable work. When the monopoly which the proctors and advocates enjoyed in Doctors' Commons was abolished, and the practice in probates and letters of administration was thrown open to the general profession, the uninitiated derived greater benefit and instruction from this book than from any other which was published for their guidance. It has become an acknowledged necessity in the library of every practitioner. Since the publication of the last edition, new rules have been promulgated for the Court of Probate, other regulations have been made by acts of parliament and an order in council, and the practice of the Court has in some respects been altered and settled. These changes have been attended to. A more useful book than this we do not know, and we need not say more than that in this edition the authors have done all in their power to increase its utility and secure its completeness."—Law Magazine and Review.

"A fifth edition in so short a time is a success that few law books can boast, and it is well deserved. Mr. Coote as a proctor possesses that intimate acquaintance with the minutiae of practice which experience only can supply: and Dr. Tristram's education as an advocate enables him to treat of the jurisdiction of the Probate Court, the law which it administers, and the principles established for the administration of that law, with a mastery of his subject that has made this production of the united labours of two such competent men the accepted text book of the Probate Court."—Law Times.

"We must not omit to praise the complete character of the Appendix, which, occupying more than half the whole work, presents us with the statutes, the orders in council, rules and fees, tables of costs and forms, and leaves nothing to be desired by the proctor or solicitor either in the routine of common form or in the stages of suits."—Law Journal.

Starkie's Law of Slander and Libel.—3rd Edition.

One thick vol. medium 8vo., 42s. cloth.

STARKIE'S TREATISE on the LAW of SLANDER and LIBEL; including MALICIOUS PROSECUTIONS, CONTEMPTS of COURT, &c.; also the Pleading and Evidence, Civil and Criminal, with Forms and Precedents. Third Edition. By H. C. FOLKARD, Barrister-at-Law.

"No one will fail to see that there were ample reasons for a new edition of this valuable work; and upon reference to this edition it will be found that Mr. Folkard has performed his task carefully and well. It is well that such a treatise should have been re edited, and it is well that it should have been edited by so careful and painstaking a man as Mr. Folkard."—Law Magazine.

"Thirty-nine years have gone by and now Mr. Folkard has brought out a third edition and certainly the first glance of the new book gives the impression of pains unspared. In point of bulk it contains more than twice as much matter as the edition of 1830. With the present volume before them, the law officers of the crown, and lawyers generally, will be saved an infinite amount of labour in search of precedents. No one can say that Mr. Folkard has failed in the full discharge of his onerous duty, and we are sure that he will earn, as he will obtain, the gratitude of the profession."—Law Journal.

"It has been most laboriously executed, and, as far as we have been able to examine, the modern cases, down to the very latest, and to the most obscure, have all been collected, and have, on the whole, been accurately set out. The profession may we think be pretty confident that whatever has been decided upon the law of libel will be found there."—Solicitors' Journal.

"It was requisite that the profession should be supplied with a new edition of this standard work upon the subject, which should bring down the law to the most recent period, and when we state that the present editor has so carefully gathered together all the authorities that he has not even omitted the case of Wason v. Walter, reported in our last number, which will in future be regarded as a leading case, we mention a fact which is a guarantee for the great care which has been devoted to this work. It would be difficult to find any part of his subject which Mr. Folkard has not fully investigated, and the result is a valuable addition to the lawyer's library which for many years has been much needed."—Justice of the Peace.

"This edition is of much greater value than either of the two which preceded it. In conclusion we may do that which is now scarcely necessary, recommend Mr. Folkard's work to the profession and the public. It is, as now edited, very valuable."—Law Times.

Clark's Digest of House of Lords Cases.

Royal 8vo., 31s. 6d. cloth.

A DIGESTED INDEX to all the REPORTS in the HOUSE of LORDS from the commencement of the Series by Dow, in 1814, to the end of the Eleven Volumes of House of Lords Cases, with references to more recent Decisions. By CHARLES CLARK, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law, Reporter by Appointment to the House of Lords.

"The decisions of the supreme tribunal of this country, however authoritative in themselves, were not, until of late years, at all familiar to the great body of the legal profession; the early reports of them being in the hands of but few persons. In that tribunal, more than in any other, questions can be considered, as they have been, upon purely legal principles, freed from the fetters and obstructions of mere precedent. The acknowledged eminence of the noble and learned persons by whom the decisions have been pronounced, gives them a value beyond their official authoritativeness. It is hoped that this Digest will have the effect of making the profession at large familiarly acquainted with them."—Pre-fatory Notice.

Barry's Practice of Conveyancing.

8vo., 18s. cloth.

A TREATISE on the PRACTICE of CONVEYANCING. By W. WHITAKER BARRY, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law, late Holder of the Studentship of the Inns of Court, and Author of "A Treatise on the Statutory Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery."

CHAP. 1. Abstracts of Title.—CHAP. 2. Agreements.—CHAP. 3. Particulars and Conditions of Sale.—CHAP. 4. Copyholds.—CHAP. 5. Covenants.—CHAP. 6. Creditors' Deeds and Arrangements.—CHAP. 7. Preparation of Deeds.—CHAP. 8. On Evidence.—CHAP. 9. Leases.—CHAP. 10. Mortgages.—CHAP. 11. Partnership Deeds and Arrangements.—CHAP. 12. Sales and Purchases.—CHAP. 13. Settlements.—CHAP. 14. Wills.—CHAP. 15. The Land Registry Act, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 53.—CHAP. 16. The Act for obtaining a Declaration of Title, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 67.—INDEX.

"The author of this valuable treatise on conveyancing has most wisely devoted a considerable part of his work to the practical illustration of the working of the recent Statutes on Registration of Title—and for this, as well as for other reasons, we feel bound to strongly recommend it to the practitioner as well as the student. The author has proved himself to be a master of the subject, for he not only gives a most valuable supply of practical suggestions, but criticises them with much ability, and we have no doubt that his criticism will meet with general approval."—Law Magazine.

"The author introduces a work which will be found a very acceptable addition to the law library, and to supply a want which we think has hitherto been felt. It contains, in a concise and readable form, the law relating to almost every point likely to arise in the ordinary every day practice of the conveyancer, with references to the various authorities and statutes to the latest date, and may be described as a manual of practical conveyancing."—Law Journal.

"This treatise supplies a want which has long been felt. There has been no treatise on the Practice of Conveyancing issued for a long time past that is adequate for the present requirements. Mr. Barry's work is essentially what it professes to be, a treatise on the Practice of Conveyancing, in which the theoretical rules of real property law are referred to only for the purpose of elucidating the practice. Mr. Barry appears to have a very accurate insight into the practice in every department of our real property system. Although we cannot boast, like Duval, of having ever read abstracts of title with pleasure, we have certainly read Mr. Barry's chapter on abstracts and numerous other parts of his work with very considerable satisfaction on account of the learning, great familiarity with practice, and power of exposition of its author. The treatise, although capable of compression, is the production of a person of great merit and still greater promise."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The Author's design was to do for the practice of conveyancing what Mr. Joshua Williams has done for its principles, to describe it simply, clearly and succinctly, recollecting that he was only laying the foundation and not crowning the edifice. A work the substance of which is so well known to our readers, needs no recommendation from us, for its merits are patent to all, from personal acquaintance with them. The information that the treatise so much admired may now be had in the more convenient form of a book, will suffice of itself to secure a large and eager demand for it."—Law Times.

"The work is clearly and agreeably written, and ably elucidates the subject in hand."—Justice of the Peace.

"The work is the most important and best treatise on conveyancing that now exists, and the student can have no better authority than Mr. Barry to get himself well up in conveyancing. Nor can the legal practitioner, and especially country solicitors, find a safer book of reference in practice than Mr. Barry's very valuable treatise."—News of the World.

"We must content ourselves with the statement that the present is a work of very great ability. There is no modern work which deals with precisely the same subject, and we have no doubt whatever that this will prove a book of very great value, both to the practitioner and to the student-at-law."—Athenaeum.

Lewis's Introduction to Equity Drafting.

Post 8vo., 12s. cloth.

PRINCIPLES of EQUITY DRAFTING; with an Appendix of Forms. By HUBERT LEWIS, B.A., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law; Author of "Principles of Conveyancing," &c.

- This Work, intended to explain the general principles of Equity Drafting, as well as to exemplify the Pleadings of the Court of Chancery, will, it is hoped, be useful to lawyers resorting to the New Equity Jurisdiction of the County Courts.

"We have little doubt that this work will soon gain a favorable place in the estimation of the profession. It is written in a clear attractive style, and is plainly the result of much thoughtful and conscientious labour."—Law Magazine and Review.

"Mr. Lewis's work is likely to have a much wider circle of readers than he could have anticipated when he commenced it, for almost every page will be applicable to County Court Practice, should the bill, in any shape or under any title, be retained in the new jurisdiction,—without it we fear that equity in the County Courts will be a mass of uncertainty,—with it every practitioner must learn the art of equity drafting, and he will find no better teacher than Mr. Lewis."—Law Times.

"This will, we think, be found a very useful work, not only to students for the bar and solicitors practising in the County Courts, as anticipated by the author, but also to the equity draftsman."—Law Journal.

Lewis's Introduction to Conveyancing.

8vo., 18s. cloth.

PRINCIPLES of CONVEYANCING explained and illustrated by Concise Precedents; with an Appendix on the effect of the Transfer of Land Act in modifying and shortening Conveyances. By HUBERT LEWIS, B.A., late Scholar of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"The preface arrested our attention, and the examination we have made of the whole treatise has given us (what may be called a new sensation) pleasure in the perusal of a work on Conveyancing. We have, indeed, read it with pleasure and profit, and we may say at once that Mr. Lewis is entitled to the credit of having produced a very useful, and, at the same time, original work. This will appear from a mere outline of his plan, which is very ably worked out. The manner in which his dissertations elucidate his subject is clear and practical, and his expositions, with the help of his precedents, have the best of all qualities in such a treatise, being eminently judicious and substantial. Mr. Lewis's work is conceived in the right spirit. Although a learned and goodly volume, it may yet, with perfect propriety, be called a 'handy book.' It is besides a courageous attempt at legal improvement; and it is, perhaps, by works of such a character that law reform may be best accomplished."—Law Magazine and Review.

"It was still felt that a work explanatory and illustrative of conveyancing precedents remained a desideratum. Mr. Lewis proposes to supply this want in the work now before us. The book will be of the greatest use to those who have some antecedent knowledge of real property law, but who have not had much experience in the preparation of conveyances. How to do it might well be the motto of the author, and certainly no ordinary lawyer can peruse Mr. Hubert Lewis's book without making himself much more competent to prepare and understand conveyancing than he was before. On the whole we consider that the work is deserving of high praise, both for design and execution. It is wholly free from the vice of book making, and indicates considerable reflection and learning. Mr. Lewis has, at all events, succeeded in producing a work to meet an acknowledged want, and we have no doubt he will find many grateful readers amongst more advanced, not less than among younger, students. In an appendix, devoted to the Land Transfer Act of last session there are some useful and novel criticisms on its provisions."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Mr. Lewis has contributed a valuable aid to the law student. He has condensed the practice of conveyancing into a shape that will facilitate its retention by the memory, and his precedents are usefully arranged as a series of progressive lessons which may be used as either illustrations or exercises."—Law Times.

"We have long felt the want of a book of this kind. It is a work of no ordinary difficulty, but, judging from a first perusal, it could not have fallen into better hands. The great object in compiling a book of this nature is to make it practically useful, and in this Mr. Lewis has been generally successful. The perusal of the work has given us much pleasure, it shows a thorough knowledge of the various subjects treated of and is clearly and intelligibly written. Students will now not only be able to become proficient draftsmen, but, by carefully studying Mr. Lewis's dissertations, may obtain an insight into the hitherto neglected principles of conveyancing."—Legal Examiner.

Tudor's Leading Cases on Real Property, &c.—Second Edition.

One thick vol. royal 8vo., 42s. cloth.

A SELECTION OF LEADING CASES on the LAW RELATING to REAL PROPERTY, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills and Deeds; with Notes. By OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. Author of "A Selection of Leading Cases in Equity." Second Edition.

"The Second Edition is now before us, and we are able to say that the same extensive knowledge and the same laborious industry as have been exhibited by Mr. Tudor on former occasions characterize this later production of his legal authorship; and it is enough at this moment to reiterate an opinion that Mr. Tudor has well maintained the high legal reputation which his standard works have achieved in all countries where the English language is spoken, and the decisions of our Courts are quoted."—Law Magazine and Review.

"The work before us comprises a digest of decisions which, if not exhaustive of all the principles of our real property code, will at least be found to leave nothing untouched or unelaborated under the numerous legal doctrines to which the cases severally relate. To Mr. Tudor's treatment of all these subjects, so complicated and so varied, we accord our entire commendation. There are no omissions of any important cases relative to the various branches of the law comprised in the work, nor are there any omissions or defects in his statement of the law itself applicable to the cases discussed by him. We cordially recommend the work to the practitioner and the student alike, but especially to the former."—Solicitors' Journal.

"This and the other volumes of Mr. Tudor are almost a law library in themselves, and we are satisfied that the student would learn more law from the careful reading of them than he would acquire from double the time given to the elaborate treatises which learned professors recommend the student to peruse, with entire forgetfulness that time and brains are limited, and that to do what they advise would be the work of a life. Smith and Mr. Tudor will together give them such a knowledge of law as they could not obtain from a whole library of text books, and of law that will be useful every day, instead of law that they will not want three times in their lives. At this well the practising lawyer might beneficially refresh his memory by a draught, when a leisure hour will permit him to study a leading case. No law library should be without this most useful book."—Law Times.

Benham's Student's Examination Guide.

12mo. 3s. cloth.

THE STUDENT'S GUIDE to the PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION for ATTORNEYS and SOLICITORS, and also to the Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations and the College of Preceptors; to which are added numerous Suggestions and Examination Questions, selected from those asked at the Law Institution. By JAMES ERLE BENHAM, of King's College, London.

"The book is artistically arranged. It will become a useful guide and instructor not only to law students but to every student who is preparing for a preliminary examination."—Law Journal.

"The book is written in a clear and agreeable style, and will no doubt be found useful by the class of readers for whom it is intended."—Law Magazine and Review.

"Mr. Benham has produced a very useful manual for the aid of intending candidates at the solicitors' preliminary examinations and the Oxford and Cambridge local examinations. He gives many suggestions on all the subjects of examination and full information thereon."—Law Examination Reporter.

"It is certainly a useful guide to that curious olla podrida expected from the candidate. There are persons who can never learn to swim without first feeling the confidence which an artificial aid gives them, and to those who are nervous at facing the troubles of dates and arithmetic it may be well to have a systematized mode of 'cram' suggested in a distinct and accurate manner."—London Review.

"A useful little treatise by Mr. James Erle Benham, intended to supply to students about to encounter the examination which precedes entering into articles of clerkship the necessary information as to subjects of study."—Star.

"He has succeeded in producing a book which will doubtless prove useful to those students who desire to prepare themselves for examination without the assistance of a tutor. The sets of examination papers appear to be judiciously selected and are tolerably full."—Irish Law Times.

Latham's Law of Window Lights.

Post 8vo., 10s. cloth.

A TREATISE on the LAW of WINDOW LIGHTS. By FRANCIS LAW LATHAM, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"This is not merely a valuable addition to the law library of the practitioner, it is a book that every law student will read with profit. It exhausts the subject of which it treats."—Law Times.

"His arrangement is logical, and he discusses fully each point of his subject. The work, in our opinion, is both perspicuous and able, and we cannot but compliment the author on it."—Law Journal.

"A treatise on this subject was wanted, and Mr. Latham has succeeded in meeting that want."—Athenaeum.

"Mr. Latham is evidently one of those authors who like to have a complete skeleton of their subject elaborated before putting pen to paper; and the consequence is, that this little work is one which we have much pleasure in recommending to the profession. The sequence of discussion is well ordered, and the author's plan well adhered to; and although the text comprises less than 250 octavo pages, the subject is quite exhaustively treated. To solicitors the volume will, we think, be particularly serviceable. Armed with the work we have now reviewed, the practitioner will be in a fair way to cope successfully with the most exigent client who comes to consult him about his windows."—Solicitors' Journal.

"This subject has acquired a general commercial interest, and a clear concise work upon it is, at this time, very opportune. Mr. Latham's treatise on the Law of Window Lights appears to supply in a convenient form all the information which, in a general way, may be required. The text throughout is lucid and is well supported by precedents."—Building News.

"The ancient light question, owing to the demand for enlarged buildings within the area of our large towns, becomes more important every day, and Mr. Latham has done well in providing a new treatise on the subject, and setting forth some of the more recent decisions of our courts. It is well arranged and clearly written. We recommend the book."—Builder.

Tudor's Law of Charitable Trusts.—Second Edition.

Post 8vo., 18s. cloth.

THE LAW OF CHARITABLE TRUSTS; with the Statutes to the end of Session 1862, the Orders, Regulations and Instructions, issued pursuant thereto; and a Selection of Schemes. By OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law; Author of "Leading Cases in Equity;" "Real Property and Conveyancing;" &c. Second Edition.

"Mr. Tudor in the present edition of his work has struck out beyond his original intention, and has made it a complete compendium of the law of charities. In carrying out this intention his object appears to have been to produce a practical and concise summary of this branch of the law. No living writer is more capable than Mr. Tudor of producing such a work: his Leading Cases in Equity, and also on the Law of Real Property, have deservedly earned for him the highest reputation as a learned, careful and judicious text-writer. The main feature of the work is the manner in which Mr. Tudor has dealt with all the recent statutes relating to this subject: we have only to add that the index is very carefully compiled."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Mr. Tudor's excellent little book on Charitable Trusts. It is indeed no longer a little book but a bulky one of some 650 pages. Mr. Tudor however is a singular painstaking author, his books, as the profession well knows, are models of industry and care, and hence their popularity. This second edition has collected the cases decided since the issue of the first, and their number is surprising—upwards of one thousand. Mr. Tudor has made his work complete by the introduction of several schemes for the settlement of charities, so that it is in all respects the text-book for the lawyer, as well as a hand-book for reference by trustees and others engaged in the management of charities."—Law Times.

"The account of the Law of Mortmain and the statutes respecting charitable bequests in their bearing on the different religious orders is full and definite, and the duties of trustees are explained in a clear and straightforward way. Altogether this work must be exceedingly useful, not to say indispensable, to all persons who are connected with charitable trusts whether as founders, managers or trustees."—English Churchman.

"To this second edition large additions are made, and it is now a complete compendium of the Law of Charities."—Clerical Journal.

"To all who have occasion to look into the nature and origin of those trusts, together with the several Acts of Parliament which affect or govern them, Mr. Tudor's work will be found of great value, more especially as in this second and improved edition all the more recent cases have been carefully collated."—Bell's Messenger.

THE COMMENTARIES OF GAIUS ON THE ROMAN LAW: with an English Translation and Annotations. By FREDERICK TOMKINS, Esq., M.A., D.C.L., and WILLIAM GEORGE LEMON, Esq., LL.B. Barristers at Law, of Lincoln's Inn.

"We congratulate the authors on the production of a work creditable alike in its inception and its progress. The translation is on the whole satisfactory: the annotations are often valuable and compiled from trustworthy sources."—Law Journal.

"They have done a good service to the study of Roman Law, and deserve the thanks of those who take an interest in legal literature."—Solicitors' Journal.

"After a careful perusal of the present work, we feel bound to speak in the highest terms of the manner in which Mr. Tomkins and Mr. Lemon have executed their task. We have no hesitation in pronouncing the work to be a most valuable contribution to juristical learning, and we unhesitatingly recommend its careful perusal to all students of Roman Law."—Law Magazine.

"The translation is carefully executed, and the annotations show extensive knowledge of the Roman Law."—Athenæum.

"The book is in every respect one of the most valuable contributions, from an English source, to our legal literature which the last half century has witnessed."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

"The want of an edition of the Commentaries of Gaius for English students has now been supplied by Dr. Tomkins and Mr. Lemon in a manner which leaves nothing to be desired. The translation of the Latin text is excellent; and the notes, upon which the value of the work mainly depends, are full of the most ample learning upon the matter of the text."—Irish Law Times.

"This is the first time that the text of Gaius has been translated into English, and it is remarkably well done by Messrs. Tomkins and Lemon in the part before us, who have also enriched the text by many valuable notes."—Law Examination Reporter.

Mosely's Articled Clerks' Handy-Book.

12mo., 7s. cloth.

A PRACTICAL HANDY-BOOK of ELEMENTARY LAW, designed for the use of Articled Clerks, with a Course of Study and Hints on Reading for the Intermediate and Final Examinations. By M. S. MOSELY, Solicitor, Clifford's Inn Prizeman, M. T. 1867.

CONTENTS:—INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.—CHAP. I.—THE FIRST YEAR.—Introduction to the office—What may be learned by copying a Draft—Explanation of technical terms—The profession, and its subdivisions—Conveyancing; Equity; Common Law; Bankruptcy Law—Office work and office routine—Course of reading for the first year—Practical hints on reading—System of self-examination. CHAP. II.—THE SECOND YEAR.—Practical view of the ordinary routine of Conveyancing—Investigation of Titles—Purchases—Leases—Mortgages—Settlements—Wills—Course of reading for the second year—Introduction to the Statute-law—General analysis of the Statutes at large, preliminary to their study. CHAP. III.—THE THIRD YEAR.—Office work—Suggestions for acquiring a knowledge of the Details of Common-law practice—The Courts—Nisi Prius business—The Brief and its preparation—Marshalling the Evidence—General rules of Evidence—A short practical view of the ordinary steps in an Action, with examples—Course of reading for the third year: the Intermediate Examination—Points to be attended to in reading for it—Method of answering the Examiners' questions—The Statute law (continued). CHAP. IV.—THE FOURTH YEAR.—The County Courts—Method of acquiring a knowledge of Practice—Hints on Advocacy—Course of reading for the fourth year. CHAP. V.—THE LAST YEAR.—Assignment of Articles—The town agent's office—London professional life—Attendance at Chambers—Rules of Pleading—General view of points to be attended to during the last year under Articles—Course of reading for the fifth year: Résumé of old books—Analysis of Case law. CHAP. VI.—The final Examination—Practical suggestions on reading for the Examination—Notes and Commouplace-book—The Examiners' standard—"Coaches," their advantages and disadvantages—Reading for honours—Routine of the Examination—Admission—Conclusion. APPENDIX.—(A.) Practical directions for Examination and Admission.—(B.) List of standard books on special subjects.

"This useful little book is intended for the use of articled clerks during the period of their articles. The style of this book is peculiar: it is an exaggeration of the style adopted by Mr. Haynes in his admirable 'Outlines of Equity.' The author seems to think the adoption of such a style the only way to make the study of the law popular, and we are not prepared to say he is wrong."—Law Magazine and Review.

"The design of this little book is to combine instruction, advice and amusement, if anything amusing can be extracted from the routine of a solicitor's office and the studies of articled clerks. The book will certainly be found useful by any articled clerk, for it contains much information which it is sometimes very troublesome to find, and the facetiousness of Mr. Mosely's manner will doubtless help to grease the course of a rough and uneasy subject."—Law Journal.

"There are few who read this book with care who will not readily admit that on many intricate points of law their notions have become much clearer than before their acquaintance with it. Both parts are well worked out, and will be found useful; but in the second division of each chapter the law student will find most valuable information, as there Mr. Mosely not only marks out the course of reading which he recommends for each year, but also carefully analyses the contents of each book, and points out those chapters and subjects which it will be most advantageous for the student to master at the first reading, and those which he ought to defer till a second perusal and a wider experience have made him more competent to understand them. The style is remarkably good, and, considering the subject, free from technical expressions."—Irish Law Times.

From the Law Times.

"The preparation of it could not have been confided to more able hands than those of Mr. Shelford, the veteran authority on real property law. With the industry that distinguishes him he has done ample justice to his task. In carefulness we have in him a second Crabb, in erudition Crabb's superior; and the result is a work of which the original author would have been proud, could it have appeared under his own auspices. It is not a book to be quoted, nor indeed could its merits be exhibited by quotation. It is essentially a book of practice, which can only be described in rude outline and dismissed with applause, and a recommendation of it to the notice of those for whose service it has been so laboriously compiled."

From the Solicitors' Journal.

"The collection of precedents contained in these two volumes are all that could be desired. They are particularly well adapted for Solicitors, being of a really practical character. They are moreover free from the useless repetitions of common forms that so much increase the bulk and expense of some collections that we could name. We know not of any collection of conveying precedents that would make it so possible for a tyro to put together a presentable draft at an emergency, or which are more handy in every respect, even for the experienced draftsman. Mr. Shelford has proved himself in this task to be not unworthy of his former reputation. To those familiar with his other works it will be a sufficient recommendation of this."

From the Law Magazine and Review.

"To this important part of his duty—the remodelling and perfecting of the Forms—even with the examination which we have already been able to afford this work, we are able to affirm, that the learned editor has been eminently successful and effected valuable improvements."

From the Law Chronicle.

"It possesses one distinctive feature in devoting more attention than usual in such works to forms of a commercial nature. We are satisfied from an examination of the present with the immediately preceding edition that Mr. Shelford has very considerably improved the character of the work, both in the prefaces and in the forms. On the whole the two volumes of Crabb's Precedents, as edited by Mr. Leonard Shelford, will be found extremely useful in a solicitor's office, presenting a large amount of real property learning, with very numerous precedents: indeed we know of no book so justly entitled to the appellation of 'handy' as the fifth edition of Mr. Crabb's Precedents."

Rouse's Copyhold Manual.—Third Edition.

12mo., 10s. 6d. cloth.

THE COPYHOLD ENFRANCHISEMENT MANUAL, giving the Law, Practice and Forms in Enfranchisements at Common Law and under Statute, and in Commutations; with the Values of Enfranchisements from the Lord's various Rights: the Principles of Calculation being clearly explained, and made practical by numerous Rules, Tables and Examples. Also all the Copyhold Acts, and several other Statutes and Notes. Third Edition. By ROLLA ROUSE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law, Author of "The Practical Conveyancer," &c.

"This new edition follows the plan of its predecessor, adopting a fivefold division:—1. The Law. 2. The Practice, with Practical Suggestions to Lords, Stewards and Copyholders. 3. The Mathematical consideration of the Subject in all its Details, with Rules, Tables and Examples. 4. Forms. 5. The Statutes, with Notes. Of these, we can only repeat what we have said before, that they exhaust the subject; they give to the practitioner all the materials required by him to conduct the enfranchisement of a copyhold, whether voluntary or compulsory."—Law Times.

"When we consider what favor Mr. Rouse's Practical Man and Practical Conveyancer have found with the profession, we feel sure the legal world will greet with pleasure a new and improved edition of his copyhold manual. The third edition of that work is before us. It is a work of great practical value, suitable to lawyers and laymen. We can freely and heartily recommend this volume to the practitioner, the steward and the copyholder."—Law Magazine.

"Now, however, that copyhold tenures are being frequently converted into freeholds, Mr. Rouse's treatise will doubtless be productive of very extensive benefit; for it seems to us to have been very carefully prepared, exceedingly well composed and written, and to indicate much experience in copyhold law on the part of the author."—Solicitors' Journal.

Shelford's Succession, Probate and Legacy Duties. Second Edition.

12mo., 16s. cloth.

THE LAW relating to the PROBATE, LEGACY and SUCCESSION DUTIES in ENGLAND, IRELAND and SCOTLAND, including all the Statutes and the Decisions on those Subjects: with Forms and Official Regulations. By LEONARD SHELFORD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. The Second Edition, with many Alterations and Additions.

"The book is written mainly for solicitors. Mr. Shelford has accordingly planned his work with careful regard to its practical utility and daily use."—Solicitors' Journal.

"One of the most useful and popular of his productions, and being now the text book on the subject nothing remains but to make known its appearance to our readers. Its merits have been already tested by most of them."—Law Times.

"On the whole Mr. Shelford's book appears to us to be the best and most complete work on this extremely intricate subject."—Law Magazine.

Woolrych's Law of Sewers.—Third Edition.

8vo., 12s. cloth.

A TREATISE of the LAW of SEWERS, including the DRAINAGE ACTS. By HUMPHRY W. WOOLRYCH, Serjeant at Law. Third Edition, with considerable Additions and Alterations.

"Two editions of it have been speedily exhausted, and a third called for. The author is an accepted authority on all subjects of this class."—Law Times.

"This is a third and greatly enlarged edition of a book which has already obtained an established reputation as the most complete discussion of the subject adapted to modern times. Since the treatise of Mr. Serjeant Callis in the early part of the 17th century, no work filling the same place has been added to the literature of the Profession. It is a work of no slight labour to digest and arrange this mass of legislation; this task, however, Mr. Serjeant Woolrych has undertaken, and an examination of his book will, we think, convince the most exacting that he has fully succeeded. No one should attempt to meddle with the Law of Sewers without its help."—Solicitors' Journal.

Grant's Law of Corporations in General.

Royal 8vo., 26s. boards.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the LAW of CORPORATIONS in GENERAL, as well Aggregate as Sole; including Municipal Corporations; Railway, Banking, Canal, and other Joint-Stock and Trading Bodies; Dean and Chapters; Universities; Colleges; Schools; Hospitals; with quasi Corporations aggregate, as Guardians of the Poor, Churchwardens, Churchwardens and Overseers, etc.; and also Corporations sole, as Bishops, Deans, Canons, Archdeacons, Parsons, etc. By JAMES GRANT, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

J. Chitty, jun's. Precedents in Pleading.—Third Edition.

Complete in One Vol. Royal 8vo., 38s. cloth.

J. CHITTY, JUN'S. PRECEDENTS in PLEADING; with copious Notes on Practice, Pleading and Evidence. Third Edition. By the late TOMPSON CHITTY, Esq., and by LEOFRIC TEMPLE, R. G. WILLIAMS, and CHARLES JEFFERY, Esquires, Barristers at Law. (Part 2 may, for the present, be had separately, price 18s. cloth, to complete sets.)

"To enter into detailed criticism and praise of this standard work would be quite out of place. In the present instance the matter has fallen into competent hands, who have spared no pains. This valuable and useful work is brought down to the present time, altered in accordance with the cases and statutes now in force. Great care has been expended by the competent editors, and its usefulness, as heretofore, will be found not to be confined to the chambers of the special pleader, but to be of a more extended character. To those who knew the work of old no recommendation is wanted, to those younger members of the profession who have not that privilege we would suggest that they should at once make its acquaintance."—Law Journal.

"Notwithstanding the great value of the Precedents in Chitty, Junior, this is the first edition of the work which has appeared since the passing of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1832. The edition of the late Mr. Pearson, which had been published a few years before that important epoch in the history of pleading, was a most useful book and of great reputation in the profession. It has been with us for long a matter of regret that no one had adapted the precedents it contained to the requirements of the existing law. We hail therefore with much satisfaction the present edition of a work to which we owe a great deal. The work which has been done has been well done. The precedents are neatly and succinctly drawn and are numerous and varied. There cannot be better models of pleading than the precedents which are given. The observations and notes have been carefully revised, and recent changes and decisions added. We cannot pay the editors a greater compliment than by saying that the work has been remodelled by them as it would have been done by the late Mr. Pearson if he had lived to perform the task which has fallen to them."—Law Magazine.

"A book almost as well known to the profession as 'Fidd' has been republished, we might almost say rewritten, and adapted to the requirements of modern pleading. Few there are for whom assistance will not be found by reference to these pages, which serve yet another useful purpose, by helping the lawyer to pick holes in his adversary's pleadings, as well as properly to frame his own. Nor is the volume useful in the Superior Courts only; practitioners in the County Courts will find it a valuable adviser in the preparation of pleadings, such as they are."—Law Times.

"Chitty's Precedents will always occupy its position upon the bookshelves of the practitioner. The plan of the work is well known, comprising condensed observations on the general law connected with the precedents, which we think is a better method than that followed in Bullen and Leake."—Law Times (Second notice).

Scriven's Law of Copyholds.—5th Edit. by Stalman.

Abridged in 1 vol. royal 8vo., £1 : 10s. cloth.

A TREATISE ON COPYHOLD, CUSTOMARY FREEHOLD and ANCIENT DEMESNE TENURE, with the Jurisdiction of Courts Baron and Courts Leet. By JOHN SCRIVEN, Serjeant at Law. Fifth Edition, containing references to Cases and Statutes to 1867. By HENRY STALMAN, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"No lawyer can see or hear the word 'copyhold' without associating with it the name of Scriven, whose book has been always esteemed not merely the best but the only one of any worth. Until a commutation of the tenure for a fixed rent-charge, after the manner of a tithe commutation, is compelled by the legislature, this treatise will lose none of its usefulness to the solicitors in the country."—Law Times.

"It would be wholly superfluous to offer one word of comment on the general body of the work. Scriven on Copyholds has for exactly half a century been not only a standard work but one of unimpeachable authority, and in its pages the present generation has learned all that is known of copyhold and customary tenures. All that is necessary to say is, that in the present edition of Scriven on Copyholds Mr. Stalman has omitted what it was useless to retain, and inserted what it was necessary to add. Until copyholds have disappeared utterly, it is at least certain that Scriven on Copyholds by Stalman will hold undisputed sway in the profession."—Law Journal.

Browning's Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Practice.

Post 8vo., 8s. cloth.

THE PRACTICE and PROCEDURE of the COURT for DIVORCE and MATRIMONIAL CAUSES, including the Acts, Rules, Orders, copious Notes of Cases and Forms of Practical Proceedings, with Tables of Fees and Bills of Costs. By W. ERNST BROWNING, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"After a careful study of this work, we unhesitatingly recommend it as well to the student as to the legal practitioner."—Law Magazine and Review.

"If the future editions are edited with the same care and ability that have been bestowed upon this, it will probably take its place as the Practice of the Divorce Court."—Jurist.

"We ought not to omit noticing the very useful precedents of bills of costs which it contains. These alone are sufficient to obtain a good circulation for this manual."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Mr. Browning's little volume will doubtless become the practice of the Divorce Court."—Law Times.

Brandon's Law of Foreign Attachment.

8vo., 14s. cloth.

A TREATISE upon the CUSTOMARY LAW of FOREIGN ATTACHMENT, and the PRACTICE of the MAYOR'S COURT of the CITY OF LONDON therein. With Forms of Procedure. By WOODTHORPE BRANDON, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Moseley's Law of Contraband of War.

Post 8vo., 5s. cloth.

WHAT IS CONTRABAND OF WAR AND WHAT IS NOT. Comprising all the American and English Authorities on the Subject. By JOSEPH MOSELEY, Esq., B.C.L., Barrister at Law.

Oke's Magisterial Synopsis.—Tenth Edition.

Dedicated by permission to the Right Hon. Lord Cairns.

Two vols., 8vo., 58s. cloth.

THE MAGISTERIAL SYNOPSIS: a Practical Guide for Magistrates, their Clerks, Attornies and Constables; Summary Convictions and Indictable Offences, with their Penalties, Punishments, Procedure, &c., being Alphabetically and Tabularly arranged. By GEORGE C. OKE, Chief Clerk to the Lord Mayor of London. Tenth Edition.

This Edition contains the Law brought down to the close of the Session, 1863.

Opinion of Lord Chancellor Westbury.

"Upper Hyde Park Gardens, October 30th, 1862.

"The Lord Chancellor presents his compliments to Mr. Oke, and thanks him very much for the valuable present of his most excellent and elaborate works, the 'Magisterial Synopsis' and 'Magisterial Formulist,' which, in the opinion of the Lord Chancellor, will be of great public service.

"To George C. Oke, Esq., &c., &c., &c., Mansion House, London."

Opinions of the late Lord Chancellor Campbell.

"I congratulate you on the great success of your valuable Synopsis, and I shall be well pleased to be Dedicatee of successive editions while you desire that I should have this honour."—Letter to Mr. Oke, dated April 6th, 1858.

"My dear Sir,—I thank you for the copy of your new edition which you have had the goodness to send me, and I am glad to hear of the increased circulation of the Work.

"Your instructions as to cases under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, will be particularly useful.

"I remain, yours faithfully,

"George C. Oke, Esq."

"CAMPBELL."

"I am aware that the Lord Mayor has at present an able assistant in the person of a gentleman of the name of Oke. Author of the 'Magisterial Synopsis,' a very enterprising, able and learned man."—The Lord Chancellor (Campbell) in the House of Lords, February 23rd, 1860.

"We are really at a loss to discover any criticism which can fairly be offered on this remarkable work. A new edition every two years is a success such as rarely falls to the lot of the greatest of legal authors, and no one pretends to deny that Mr. Oke has fairly earned his good fortune. The first edition started with 410 pages of matter. Legislation, judicial decisions and the unwearied research, care and skill of the author have swelled 410 into 1402 pages, so that he is driven to offer an apology for the bulk of the book and for its compulsory division into two handsome volumes. It would be idle in us to take a survey of the general contents of a work which is familiar to all persons who are concerned in the administration of justice in petty sessions. It is enough to say that Mr. Oke's Synopsis is not only the standard guide to the magisterial bench, but that it is regarded throughout England as the indispensable companion of every justice of the peace."—Law Journal.

"Mr. Oke's Synopsis has been for so many years before the public, and its reputation is so fully established, that any elaborate criticism upon the work as a whole would be out of place on the occasion of the publication of a new edition. The functions of magistrates out of quarter sessions and of their clerks and officers are so many and of so very miscellaneous a character, that there is perhaps no part of our judicial system in which the services of a reliable and easily accessible guide is so absolutely necessary to all those who have to take any part in the working of the system. To meet this need there are few men who have better reason to know exactly what is necessary than Mr. Oke, and few men better able to supply it, and the success with which he has laboured to this end has been amply attested by the reception which the various editions of his work have met with. But the very nature of the subject with which this work deals, renders frequent new editions most important. This edition incorporates the statute law affecting magistrates since the date of the last edition, as well as the decisions of the courts; and, whether by good luck or good guidance, the publication has been so timed as to enable the author to bring the statute law down to the actual date of issue. The work in its present form is considerably increased in bulk, but it retains its two great merits—completeness and conciseness."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The tenth edition of this valuable compendium of magisterial law makes its appearance in two volumes, a great improvement for convenience of reference upon the single bulky volume of the former editions. The position which the work has gained and the growing demand for it are shown by the fact that a ninth edition was published so lately as 1866. In accordance with the suggestion made to Mr. Oke, the present edition has been prepared and issued immediately after the fourth edition of its equally useful companion, The Magisterial Formulist. The careful and conscientious treatment which Mr. Oke always bestows upon whatever he takes in hand, entitles him to full credit when he says that 'many titles have been enlarged, much new matter inserted, and a variety of minute improvements made in the references, upon all of which I have bestowed my personal attention and utmost care.'"—Law Magazine.

Oke's Magisterial Formulist.—Fourth Edition.

One thick volume, 8vo., 38s. cloth.

THE MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST: being a complete Collection of Forms and Precedents for practical use in all Cases out of Quarter Sessions, and in Parochial Matters, by Magistrates, their Clerks, Attornies and Constables: with an Introduction, Explanatory Directions, Variations and Notes. By GEORGE C. OKE, Author of "The Magisterial Synopsis." Fourth Edition, enlarged and improved.

"The publication of a new edition of this most useful collection of forms has been urgently called for. Mr. Oke's works are so well known to all who are concerned in the administration of magisterial law, that we need say no more than that the present edition seems to have been prepared with his usual care. On a reference to a very full index at the end of the book, we have been unable to detect the omission of any subject in the place where it might be expected to be found, and such forms as the author has had to draw, and not merely to transcribe, appear well executed."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Mr. Oke has had many predecessors in his office of Chief Clerk to the Lord Mayor of London of skill, learning and reputation, but it would be impossible to name any one of such officers who has rendered such signal services to the administration of the law by the justices as the author of the book before us. It is indeed difficult to offer any remarks of moment upon a work which has gone through three editions, and has been acknowledged as complete by all who has had occasion to use it. But time alone, and the mass of new legislation which it has brought with it, have made the revision of the book necessary. The important changes and extensions of the law administered by the magistrates since the session of 1861 have justified and demanded a new edition, and in that new edition we believe will be found the same qualities of accuracy and completeness which distinguished its three predecessors. No clerk to justices, and no justice who is anxious to discharge his onerous functions successfully, should be without the 'Magisterial Formulist' and the 'Magisterial Synopsis'; and it need scarcely be added that those members of the profession who are brought in contact with business in petty sessions will derive great assistance from them."—Law Journal.

"This work is too well known to need eulogy. It is in universal use in magistrates' courts; it has been out of print for some time, and a new edition was urgently required. We believe that Mr. Oke purposely delayed it that it might be made contemporaneous, or nearly so, with the Synopsis. The contents are brought down to the end of last year, and consequently it includes all the forms required by the new statutes and decisions of the six years that have elapsed since the publication of the third edition. They have been arranged under divers new titles, and especially the modes of describing indictable offences have been much enlarged. It is a book that has been known so long, and so extensively, that no further description of it is needed now."—Law Times.

Oke's Law of Turnpike Roads.—Second Edition.

12mo., 18s. cloth.

THE LAWS of TURNPIKE ROADS; comprising the whole of the General Acts; the Acts as to the Union of Trusts, for facilitating Arrangements with their Creditors; the Interference of Railways and other Public Works with Roads, their Non-repair, and enforcing Contributions from Parishes (including the Acts as to South Wales Turnpike Roads), &c. &c.; practically arranged, with Cases, Notes, Forms, &c. &c. By GEORGE C. OKE, Author of "The Magisterial Synopsis." Second Edition.

"In the 'Synopsis' Mr. Oke is unique; the plan was perfectly original and he has no competitor. In the Turnpike Law he is himself a competitor with others, who had previously possession of the field. Nevertheless, so well has he executed his design that his volume has fairly taken precedence in the esteem of the profession, because he has written it with the same industrious research and painstaking correction which distinguished the 'Synopsis.'—Law Times.

"All Mr. Oke's works are well done, and his 'Turnpike Laws' is an admirable specimen of the class of books required for the guidance of magistrates and legal practitioners in country districts."—Solicitors' Journal.

Chadwick's Probate Court Manual.

Royal 8vo., 12s. cloth.

EXAMPLES of ADMINISTRATION BONDS for the COURT of PROBATE; exhibiting the Principle of various Grants of Administration, and the correct Mode of preparing the Bonds in respect thereof; also Directions for preparing the Oaths, arranged for practical utility. With Extracts from the Statutes; also various Forms of Affirmation prescribed by Acts of Parliament, and a Supplemental Notice, bringing the work down to 1865. By SAMUEL CHADWICK, of Her Majesty's Court of Probate.

"We undertake to say that the possession of this volume by practitioners will prevent many a hitch and awkward delay, proving to the lawyer himself and difficult to be satisfactorily explained to the clients."—Law Magazine and Review.

"Mr. Chadwick's volume will be a necessary part of the law library of the practitioner, for he has collected precedents that are in constant requirement. This is purely a book of practice, but therefore the more valuable. It tells the reader what to do, and that is the information most required after a lawyer begins to practise."—Law Times.

Grant's Law of Banking.—Second Edition by Fisher.

8vo. 21s. cloth.

GRANT'S LAW of BANKERS and BANKING and BANKS OF ISSUE, Limited and Chartered, and Winding-up; Directors, Managers and Officers; and the Law as to Cheques, Circular Notes or Letters of Credit, Bank Notes, Exchequer Bills, Coupons, Deposits, &c. (Appendix contains the Bank Notes Issue Bill, and Reasons for Bill, and Official Bank Returns.) Second Edition. By R. A. FISHER, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"The present editor has very much increased the value of the original work, a work whose sterling merits had already raised it to the rank of a standard text-book."—Law Magazine.

"No man in the profession was more competent to treat the subject of Banking than Mr. Grant. This volume appears opportunely. To all engaged in the litigation, as well as to all legal advisers of Bankers, Mr. Grant's work will be an invaluable assistant. It is a clear and careful treatise on a subject not already exhausted, and it must become the text-book upon it."—Law Times.

"A Second Edition of Mr. Grant's well-known treatise on this branch of the law has been called for and very ably supplied by Mr. Fisher."—Law Times, Second Notice.

"The learning and industry which were so conspicuous in Mr. Grant's former work are equally apparent in this. The book supplies a real want, which has long been felt both by the profession and by the public at large."—Jurist.

"We commend this work to our readers. It is at once practical and intelligible, and is of use alike to the unprofessional as well as the professional reader. No bank, whether a private concern or a joint-stock company, should be without it."—Money Market Review.

Parkinson's Common Law Chamber Practice.

12mo., 7s. cloth.

A HANDY BOOK FOR THE COMMON LAW JUDGES' CHAMBERS. By GEO. H. PARKINSON, Chamber Clerk to the Hon. Mr. Justice Byles.

"For this work Mr. Parkinson is eminently qualified."—Jurist.

"It is extremely well calculated for the purpose for which it is intended. So much work is now done in Common Law Chambers by junior clerks that such a little treatise is much wanted. Mr. Parkinson has performed his task skillfully and with care."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The practice in Chambers has become sufficiently important to call for a treatise devoted to it, nor could a more competent man for the task have presented himself than Mr. Parkinson, whose great experience as well as intelligence have long placed him in the position of an authority on all matters appertaining to this peculiar but very extensive branch of Common Law Practice."—Law Times.

"The e is such that would prove very useful to the practitioner in Mr. Parkinson's compilation, and which, so far as we are aware, is not to be found in any other book collected with equal conciseness."—Law Magazine and Review.

Coombs' Manual of Solicitors' Bookkeeping.

8vo., 10s. 6d. cloth.

A MANUAL of SOLICITORS' BOOKKEEPING: comprising Practical Exemplifications of a Concise and Simple Plan of Double Entry, with Forms of Account and other Books relating to Bills, Cash, &c., showing their Operation, giving Instructions for Keeping, Posting and Balancing them, and Directions for Drawing Costs, adapted to a large or small, sole or partnership business. By W. BAYLEY COOMBS, Law Accountant and Costs Draftsman.

 The various Account Books described in the above System, the forms of which are copyright, may be had from the Publishers at the prices stated in the work, page 274.

"It adds some excellent instructions for drawing bills of costs. Mr. Coombs is a practical man, and has produced a practical book."—Law Times.

"A work in which the really superfluous has been omitted, and that only which is necessary and useful in the ordinary routine in an attorney's office has been retained. He has performed his task in a masterly manner, and in doing so has given the why and the wherefore of the whole system of Solicitors' Bookkeeping. The volume is the most comprehensive we remember to have seen on the subject, and from the clear and intelligible manner in which the whole has been worked out it will render it unexceptionable in the hands of the student and the practitioner."—Law Magazine.

"So clear do the instructions appear, that a tyro of average skill and abilities, with application, could under ordinary circumstances open and keep the accounts of a business; and, so far as we can judge, the author has succeeded in his endeavour to divest Solicitors' Bookkeeping of complexity, and to be concise and simple, without being inefficient. We cannot dismiss this volume without briefly commenting upon the excellent style in which it is submitted to the profession."—Law Journal.

"Mr. Coombs' book appears to us to have been carefully and usefully prepared, and the directions and illustrations given as to solicitors' bookkeeping in general are of such a nature that the work may be referred to with confidence on any point relating to Solicitors' Bookkeeping as a safe guide to the subject. This is not merely a valuable addition to the library of every solicitor, it is a book that every articulated clerk, now that intermediate examinations embrace bookkeeping, will be read with profit and benefit to himself. It may be fairly said to exhaust the subject of which it treats, and the author has adopted a system having the great advantage of simplicity, while he employs as small a number of books as is consistent with a clear and accurate record of the business of each day for the purpose. We have little doubt that this work will gain a favourable place in the estimation of the profession and of law students, and will stand the test of the value of a book written professedly for practical men—the number of editions through which it will pass."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Mr. Coombs' Manual of Solicitors' Bookkeeping, in our opinion, takes the safe middle course, between too great intricacy of arrangement on one side, and want of detail and explanation on the other. His system can be equally followed in a small office, where a regular accountant is not employed, and in an office where the staff is large. Solicitors who manage property will find the specimens of rental accounts given in the Appendix very useful."—Irish Law Times.

"This is a work of considerable extent, prepared at the request of eminent solicitors, by an experienced law accountant."—Athenæum.

Lushington's Naval Prize Law.

Royal 8vo., 10s. 6d. cloth.

A MANUAL of NAVAL PRIZE LAW. By GODFREY LUSHINGTON, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

Lovesy's Law of Arbitration (Masters and Workmen).

12mo. 4s. cloth.

(Dedicated, by permission, to Lord St. Leonards.)

THE LAW of ARBITRATION between MASTERS and WORKMEN, as founded upon the Councils of Conciliation Act of 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 105), the Masters and Workmen Act (5 Geo. 4, c. 96), and other Acts, with an Introduction and Notes. By C. W. LOVESY, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"I think you have bestowed much attention upon the late statute and added some useful notes."—Lord St. Leonards.

Trower's Church Building Laws.

Post 8vo. 8s. cloth.

THE LAW of the BUILDING of CHURCHES, PARSONAGES, and SCHOOLS, and of the Division of Parishes and Places. By CHARLES FRANCIS TROWER, M.A., of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law, late Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, and late Secretary of Presentations to Lord Chancellor Westbury.

"We may pronounce it a useful work. It contains a great mass of information of essential import, and those who, as parishioners, legal advisers, or clergymen, are concerned with glebes, endowments, district chapelries, parishes, ecclesiastical commissions, and such like matters, about which the public and notably the clerical public, seem to know but little, but which it is needless to say are matters of much importance."—Solicitors' Journal.

"It is his book is just the one we could wish every clergyman to possess, for if it was in the hands of our readers they would be saved the trouble of asking us very many questions."—Clerical Journal.

"In a well-arranged volume this gentleman points out concisely and intelligibly how the difficulties which usually beset parties in such matters may be avoided."—Oxford University Herald.

"On all the topics germane to its title this volume will be found a handy book of ecclesiastical law, and should on that account be made widely known among the clergy."—Church Mail.

"It is a compact and handy treatise, very clearly written, well arranged, easy of reference, and, besides a good table of contents, it has an elaborate index. It is a book we are glad to have and to recommend."—Literary Churchman.

"Not only has Mr. Trower performed this work, but he has performed it in a thoroughly satisfactory manner, giving us a volume which will set many minds at rest, and present, it may be, many a parish squabble, or its natural complement a law suit."—Church Opinion.

"Mr. Trower has, as we have said, supplied this need; and done so fairly well. He has produced a very useful and concise practical guide."—Gardian.

"This book will be a boon to many a puzzled and bewildered clergyman. We commend the book to every clergyman."—Ch. Chm.

"We welcome Mr. Trower's book as a valuable and useful manual of the obscurest and most discreditable portion of the statute book."—Herald.

"A task by no means lightening, but which the author has performed in a manner which does justice to the subject and credit to his own reputation as a scholar and lawyer."—Builder.

Drewry's Equity Pleader.

12mo., 6s. cloth.

A CONCISE TREATISE on the PRINCIPLES of EQUITY PLEADING; with Precedents. By C. STEWART DREWRY, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"It will be found of great utility as introductory to the more elaborate treatises, or to refresh the memory after the study of the larger books."—Law Times.

"Keeping in view Mr. Drewry's design, namely, to produce a work on Equity Pleading for the information of students, he has successfully accomplished his professed object."—Law Chronicle.

"As an introduction to pleadings as they now subsist in the Equity Courts the book is well timed."—Law Magazine and Law Review.

Petersdorff's Abridgment of the Common Law.—New Ed.

6 vols., Royal 8vo., 7l. 7s. cloth.

A CONCISE, PRACTICAL ABRIDGMENT of the COMMON AND STATUTE LAW, as at present administered in the Common Law, Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Courts, excluding all that is obsolete, overruled or superseded: comprising a Series of Condensed Treatises on the different Branches of the Law, with detailed Directions, Forms and Precedents; an Alphabetical Dictionary of Technical Law Terms and Maxims, and a Collection of Words that have received a Special Judicial Construction; the whole illustrated by References to the principal Cases in Equity, and in the Scotch, American and Irish Reports, and the most eminent text writers. By CHARLES PETERSDORFF, Serjeant-at-Law, assisted by CHARLES W. WOOD, Esq., and WALKER MARSHALL, Esq., Barristers-at-Law.

"Mr. Serjeant Petersdorff has brought to a close his labours upon this great and useful work. It is a complete dictionary of the law as it exists at the present day, and is also an index to every law library. We noticed the plan and object of this work at some length on the completion of the first volume. Now that the sixth has been published, we have nothing to add, except that the execution seems to be in the best style of this laborious jurist and professional writer."—Times.

Goldsmith's Equity.—Fifth Edition.

Post 8vo., 16s. cloth.

THE DOCTRINE and PRACTICE of EQUITY: or, a Concise Outline of Proceedings in the High Court of Chancery. Designed principally for the Use of Students. By G. GOLDSMITH, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. Fifth Edition, including all the alterations made in pursuance of the late acts and the orders thereon to the present time.

"A volume designed for the law student. Hence such a volume as Mr. Goldsmith has published is a perennial, and, while addressed principally to the student, it may be profitably read by the practitioner. Five editions attest the approval of those who have experienced the benefit of its instructions. It has grown in bulk with each successive appearance, as Mr. Goldsmith discovered what were the wants of his readers, and a continued succession of new topics has been added. It is now an extremely comprehensive sketch of the history, jurisdiction and practice of our Courts of Equity—a summary of what could be obtained only by hard reading of Reeve and Spence and Ayckbourn and Drewry."—Law Times.

"The excellencies of each ('Smith's Manual' and 'Hunter's Suit') appear to be successfully combined in Mr. Goldsmith's Treatise. Though professedly an elementary work, its merits are greater than its pretensions. Professing to accomplish a limited task, that task has been well done. The knowledge in haste and by piecemeal acquired, remains long ill digested, perhaps through life, crude and unready. This manual seeks to prevent such a result by introducing to the learner a plain summary of the doctrines of equity, together with a sketch of the practice in the Chancery Courts. We cordially recommend Mr. Goldsmith's Treatise to those for whom it is designed."—The Law Magazine and Review.

"It contains a great deal of miscellaneous information, and if a student were confined to the selection of one book on equity, both for its doctrine and practice, he could hardly do better than choose the one before us."—The Solicitors' Journal.

Sir T. E. May's Parliamentary Practice.—Sixth Edition.

One very thick volume, 8vo., 35s. cloth.

A TREATISE on the LAW, PRIVILEGES, PROCEEDINGS and USAGE of PARLIAMENT. By Sir THOMAS ERSKINE MAY, K.C.B., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law; Clerk Assistant of the House of Commons. Sixth Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

CONTENTS:—Book I. Constitution, Powers and Privileges of Parliament.—Book II. Practice and Proceedings in Parliament.—Book III. The Manner of Passing Private Bills, with the Standing Orders in both Houses, and the most recent Precedents.

"The high reputation and the proved practical utility of Sir T. Erskine May's work, render it unnecessary for us to say anything as to its merits. The present edition has been carefully revised and considerably enlarged. It comprises every alteration in the Law and Practice of Parliament, and all material precedents relating to public and private business from the date of the former edition down to the end of the session of 1867, and many even of the last session, including the latest orders concerning committees and references on private bills. Sir T. Erskine May deserves the best thanks of all who are interested in parliamentary proceedings, for the care and attention he has bestowed in preparing this edition of his valuable work."—Law Magazine.

"We hail with satisfaction a new edition of this admirable work. The politician, the lawyer, the parliamentary agent and the educated gentleman, will find here a teacher, a guide, a digest of practice and a pleasing companion. To legal readers, the first portion of this work is of the most value. We may advert to the great care with which the author has noted up and incorporated in this new edition all the changes and events of importance since the publication of the fifth edition. From unfragmentary excerpts, it is plain that the author has taken pains to add all novel matter bearing on the subject matter, and to maintain for the work that character for accuracy and completeness which it has already acquired."—Law Journal.

"Six editions in twenty-four years attest the estimation in which this great work is held by the members of successive Parliaments, by the promoters of private bills, and by constitutional lawyers. It is an exhaustive treatise on that most lawless of all law the Law of Parliament. Since the publication of the last edition considerable changes have been made in the Standing Orders of both Houses, and these have been embodied in the present edition. We may point to the words sixth edition upon the title page as the best possible testimony to its practical value, for all who are in any way concerned in the Law and Practice of Parliament."—Law Times.

"Perhaps no work has achieved a greater reputation among lawyers than May's Parliamentary Practice. Since the first publication in 1844, a succession of editions have been called for, and now, after an interval of four years since the issue of the fifth, a sixth edition has been found necessary. The work is too well-known to need the repetition of any description of its scope, and we will therefore merely add that it is extremely useful to the parliamentary lawyer, in fact the only work in which he can obtain every information on matters of practice; and is moreover a work from which the lay reader may learn very much as to the history and constitution of English Parliamentary Government."—Solicitors' Journal.

Glen's Law of Highways.—Second Edition.

Post 8vo., 20s. cloth.

The LAW of HIGHWAYS: comprising the Highway Acts 1835, 1862 and 1864; the South Wales Highway Act; the Statutes and Decisions of the Courts on the subject of Highways, Bridges, Ferries, &c., including the Duties of Highway Boards, Surveyors of Highways, the Law of Highways in Local Board of Health Districts; Highways affected by Railways, and Locomotives on Highways. With an Appendix of Statutes in force relating to Highways. By W. CUNNINGHAM GLEN, Esq., Barrister at Law. Second Edition.

"Altogether we may confidently venture to confirm the statement in the preface that it may now fairly claim to be recognized as a standard authority on the law of highways by those who are engaged officially or otherwise in the administration of that branch of the law. It is so as we from personal knowledge can affirm, and, we may add, that it is received by them as a trustworthy guide in the discharge of their onerous duties."—Law Times.

"The present edition of Mr. Glen's work contains a great deal of valuable matter which is entirely new. To those interested in the law of highways this manual as it now appears will be found a safe and efficient guide."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Glen has an established reputation in the legal profession as a careful and laborious writer, and this new edition of his new work on highway law will convince those who refer to it that he has neglected no topic likely to be useful to those whose duties require them to have a knowledge of this particular branch of the law. This work aspires above others which profess merely to be annotated reprints of acts of parliament. It will be found to contain much information which might be looked for elsewhere in vain. The general law upon the subject is set forth with a care and lucidity deserving of great praise, and a good index facilitates reference, and renders this work the most complete on this important subject which has yet been published."—Justice of the Peace.

"Mr. Glen may well say that an entire revision of the first edition was necessitated by the recent statutes, and his second edition is a bulky volume of 800 pages. His work may be read with satisfaction by the general student as well as referred to with confidence by the practitioner. We need say nothing further of this second edition than that we think it likely to maintain fully the reputation obtained by its predecessor. It has the advantages, by no means unworthy of consideration, of being well printed and well indexed, as well as well arranged, and a copious index of statutes renders it a perfect compendium of the authorities bearing in any way on the law of highways."—Solicitors' Journal.

Fry's Specific Performance of Contracts.

8vo., 16s. cloth.

A TREATISE on the SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE of CONTRACTS, including those of Public Companies, with a Preliminary Chapter on the Provisions of the Chancery Amendment Act, 1858. By EDWARD FRY, B.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"It will be seen what a masterly grasp the author has taken of his subject, and his treatment of the various parts of it equally exhibits the hand of a man who has studied the law as a science. He is skilful in the extraction of principles, precise in the exposition of them, apt in their application to the particular case, but in all he is thoroughly practical. The practitioner who uses it as a text book will find in it an adviser who will tell him not only what the law is, but how it may be enforced."—Law Times.

"Mr. Fry's work presents in a reasonable compass a large quantity of modern learning on the subject of contracts, with reference to the common remedy by specific performance, and will thus be acceptable to the profession generally."—Law Chronicle.

"There is a closeness and clearness in its style, and a latent fulness in the exposition, which not only argue a knowledge of the law, but of those varying circumstances in human society to which the law has to be applied."—Spectator.

"Mr. Fry's elaborate essay appears to exhaust the subject, on which he has cited and brought to bear, with great diligence, some 1,500 cases, which include those of the latest reports."—Law Magazine and Review.

"Although a professional work, it is sufficiently popular in style to be serviceable to all persons engaged in commercial or joint-stock undertakings."—The Times.

"The law of specific performance is a growing law just now, and the characteristic which gives it its special value to Mr. Fry's work is, that the recent cases are as well digested in his mind as the older ones. Mr. Fry's is one of the best specimens of the modern law book."—The Economist.

Smith's Bar Education.

8vo., 9s. cloth.

A HISTORY of EDUCATION for the ENGLISH BAR, with SUGGESTIONS as to SUBJECTS and METHODS of STUDY. By PHILIP ANSTIE SMITH, Esq., M.A., LL.B., Barrister-at-Law.

Powell on Evidence.—Third Edition by Cutler & Griffin.

12mo., 16s. cloth.

THE PRINCIPLES and PRACTICE of the LAW of EVIDENCE. By EDMUND POWELL, M.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law. Third Edition by JOHN CUTLER, B.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law, Professor of English Law and Jurisprudence, and Professor of Indian Jurisprudence at King's College, London; and EDMUND FULLER GRIFFIN, B.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law. To which is added a SUPPLEMENT containing the alterations in the Law of Evidence effected by The Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869; The Documentary Evidence Act, 1868; The Bankruptcy Act, 1869; The Habitual Criminals Act, 1869; together with the leading Cases decided since February, 1868.

The Supplement may be had separately price 1s. sewed.

"We have very great pleasure in noticing this edition of a work with which we have long been familiar. It was certainly a good idea to make the book useful to the equity practitioner. It was a still better idea to adapt the Anglo-Indian rules of evidence, which must assist materially those who are studying in England for the Indian bar, or preparing for the Indian civil service. Mr. Cutler, being Professor of Indian Jurisprudence at King's College, has executed this latter branch of the work with the ability which was to be expected from him, and we can heartily recommend this excellent edition of Mr. Powell's book as likely to prove of very wide utility."—Law Times.

"To put before students in an attractive and concise form the principles of the laws of evidence the authors have achieved a success. The treatise before us has with great care and skill incorporated the principles of evidence observed in equity, and also the salient rules adopted in the Anglo-Indian courts. While we think that the sphere of this treatise must be confined to the education of students, we have no hesitation in asserting that within that sphere the book is a great success, and we cordially recommend the volume to students both for the English bar and for the Indian bar. Its simplicity and perspicuity render it also a valuable aid to members of the Indian civil service."—Law Journal.

"This is a new edition of a work which we fancy has scarcely been as well known as it deserves. It has not of course the pretensions to completeness of Mr. Pitt Taylor's book, nor possibly has it so much merit as an original and scientific treatise as Mr. Best's, at the same time it is probably more useful than either for ready reference in court on ordinary points. The present volume is of handy size, is moderately cheap, and its contents are remarkably well arranged, so that anything it contains can be rapidly found. We think this will be enough to make the work useful to practitioners on circuit, at quarter sessions, and especially in county courts where access to a library is not usually to be had and it is inconvenient or impossible to take many or large books. To students and young barristers also the book will be useful, not only for reading at home, as more practical than Best and less detailed than Taylor, but also for taking with them into court."—Solicitors' Journal.

"This is a good edition of a very useful work. The book itself we have always considered as well adapted for the student and convenient for the practitioner. It explains principles clearly, and illustrates them without overloading them by the cases quoted. The work is more practical in its object than that of Mr. Best, and treats the subject in a more succinct manner than Mr. Pitt Taylor. There could be no better introduction to the study of the law of evidence than Mr. Powell's book, whilst it is perfectly suitable for ordinary reference, and the care that has been bestowed on it by the present editors will, we think, considerably enhance its value. The law has been brought down to the close of last year, and the principles of the law of evidence followed by the Court of Chancery have been incorporated in the work, and the rules of evidence adopted by the Anglo-Indian courts have been referred to, the chief part of the Indian Evidence Act being in the appendix. This last feature of the work will render it very valuable for those who are studying for the Indian civil service, and will not be without interest for all who wish to understand thoroughly the principles of the law of evidence."—Law Magazine and Review.

"We are glad to see a new edition of Mr. Powell's work on the law of evidence. The present edition is ably edited by Mr. Cutler and Mr. Griffin, who have, in addition to the previous text, added the principles and practice of the law of evidence adopted by the Court of Chancery, and other important matter, and brought down the law to the present time. The book will be found a most useful addition to the lawyer's library, and to those practising, or about to practise, in the county courts it is almost a necessity."—Law Examination Reporter.

. Although in this work the most important decisions only are quoted, and as a rule but one authority is given for each proposition, yet there are upwards of 400 cases cited therein which do not appear in the table of cases prefixed to the latest edition of "Taylor on Evidence."

Wills on Circumstantial Evidence.—Fourth Edition.

8vo., 10s. cloth.

AN ESSAY on the PRINCIPLES of CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE. Illustrated by numerous Cases. By the late WILLIAM WILLS, Esq. Fourth Edition, edited by his Son, ALFRED WILLS, Esq., Barrister at Law.

Fourth Edition. 8vo., 11s. cloth.

AN EXAMINATION OF THE RULES OF LAW respecting the Admission of EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE in Aid of the INTERPRETATION OF WILLS. By the Right Hon. Sir JAMES WIGRAM, Knt. The Fourth Edition, prepared for the press with the sanction of the learned Author, by W. KNOX WIGRAM, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

"In the celebrated treatise of Sir James Wigram, the rules of law are stated, discussed and explained in a manner which has excited the admiration of every judge who has had to consult it"—Lord Kingsdown, in a Privy Council Judgment, July 8th, 1858.

Williams's Common Law Pleading and Practice.

8vo., 12s. cloth.

An INTRODUCTION to PRACTICE and PLEADING in the SUPERIOR COURTS of LAW, embracing an outline of the whole proceedings in an Action at Law, on Motion, and at Judges' Chambers; together with the Rules of Pleading and Practice, and Forms of all the principal Proceedings. By WATKIN WILLIAMS, Esq., M.P., of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.

"For the Student especially the book has features of peculiar value, it is at the same time scientific and practical, and throughout the work there is a judicious union of general principles with a practical treatment of the subject, illustrated by forms and examples of the main proceedings."—Jurist.

Bainbridge's Law of Mines and Minerals.—3rd Edit.

8vo., 30s. cloth.

A TREATISE on the LAW of MINES and MINERALS. By WILLIAM BAINBRIDGE, Esq., F.G.S., of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law. Third Edition, carefully revised, and much enlarged by additional matter relating to manorial rights—rights of way and water and other mining easements—the sale of mines and shares—the construction of leases—cost book and general partnerships—injuries from undermining and inundations—barriers and working out of bounds. With an Appendix of Forms and Customs and a Glossary of English Mining Terms.

"When a work has reached three editions, criticism as to its practical value is superfluous. We believe that this work was the first published in England on the special subject of mining law—others have since been published—but we see no reason in looking at the volume before us to believe that it has yet been superseded."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Bainbridge was we believe the first to collect and publish, in a separate treatise, the Law of Mines and Minerals, and the work was so well done that his volume at once took its place in the law library as the text book on the subject to which it was devoted. This work must be already familiar to all readers whose practice brings them in any manner in connection with mines or mining, and they well know its value. We can only say of this new edition that it is in all respects worthy of its predecessors."—Law Times.

"After an interval of eleven years we have to welcome a new edition of Mr. Bainbridge's work on mines and minerals. It would be entirely superfluous to attempt a general review of a work which has for so long a period occupied the position of the standard work on this important subject. Those only who, by the nature of their practice, have learned to lean upon Mr. Bainbridge as on a solid staff, can appreciate the deep research, the admirable method, and the graceful style of this model treatise. Therefore we are merely reduced to the inquiry, whether the law has, by force of statutes and of judicial decisions, undergone such development, modification, or change since the year 1856 as to justify a new edition? That question may be readily answered in the affirmative, and the additions and corrections made in the volume before us furnish ample evidence of the fact. It may be also stated that this book, being priced at 30s., has the exceptional character of being a cheap law publication."—Law Journal.

Indian Civil Service Examinations.

8vo. 6s. cloth.

AN ANALYSIS of the INDIAN PENAL CODE (Act XLV. of 1860), with Notes. By JOHN CUTLER, B.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law, Professor of English Law and Jurisprudence, and Professor of Indian Jurisprudence at King's College, London, and EDMUND FULLER GRIFFIN, B.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.

"It may be added that the code is just at present out of print, so that the production of an analysis at the present moment is especially opportune. Messrs. Cutler and Griffin have produced a useful little book, and produced it at a time when it will be especially useful."—Solicitors' Journal.

"This analysis of the Indian Penal Code seems to have conferred a great boon on the Indian practitioner, and will doubtless be of use to professional men in England. It has a good index."—Law Magazine.

Davis's Criminal Law Consolidation Acts.

12mo., 10s. cloth.

THE NEW CRIMINAL LAW CONSOLIDATION ACTS, 1861; with an Introduction and practical Notes, illustrated by a copious reference to Cases decided by the Court of Criminal Appeal. Together with alphabetical Tables of Offences, as well those punishable upon Summary Conviction as upon Indictment, and including the Offences under the New Bankruptcy Act, so arranged as to present at one view the particular Offence, the Old or New Statute upon which it is founded, and the Limits of Punishment; and a full Index. By JAMES EDWARD DAVIS, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

"This is a carefully prepared edition of the New Criminal Law Consolidation Acts, and will be found extremely useful for practical purposes. The name of Mr. Davis will be a sufficient guarantee that the work has been done in a lawyer-like manner. There can be no doubt that Mr. Davis's edition of the New Criminal Statutes will prove very serviceable both to magistrates and the profession."—Law Magazine and Review.

Powell's Law of Inland Carriers.—Second Edition.

8vo., 14s. cloth.

THE LAW OF INLAND CARRIERS, especially as regulated by the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854. By EDMUND POWELL, Esq., of Lincoln College, Oxon, M.A., and of the Western Circuit, Barrister at Law, Author of "Principles and Practice of the Law of Evidence." Second Edition, almost re-written.

"The treatise before us states the law of which it treats ably and clearly, and contains a good index."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Mr. Powell's writing is singularly precise and condensed, without being at all dry, as those who have read his admirable Book of Evidence will attest. It will be seen, from our outline of the contents, how exhaustively the subject has been treated, and that it is entitled to be, that which it aspires to become, the text book on the Law of Carriers."—Law Times.

"The subject of this treatise is not indeed a large one, but it has been got up by Mr. Powell with considerable care, and contains ample notice of the most recent cases and authorities."—Jurist.

"The two chapters on the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1856, are quite new, and the recent cases under the provisions of that statute are analyzed in lucid language."—Law Magazine.
